Relay Moral Programmes

I am appealing to FRCN Programme planners to re-schedule their programmes to accommodate more Religious programmes. Relaying Religious programmes on Radio and Television is a form of education we need for the training of our children, to become responsible members of the society.

I therefore suggest that immoral foreign films be discarded, thereby giving room for more Religious Programmes.

Bring Back "Combat"

I NOTICED that the Nigerian Television Authority (N.T.A. - 2) Channel 5 programme Schedule was not included in the monthly Radio-TV Times. And the same applied to states Television and Radio Stations. I am appealing to the editor to please include these stations programme Schedules in the next edition of R.T.V.T.

It will also be to the advantage of many viewers if NTA station could bring back the film - "Combat" - a very interesting, educative and exciting film.

Our ace photographer, has focused the lens of his camera on a "Lilly of the field" in an effort to satisfy the usual longing of the Radio/TV Times readers for the special front page girl. The portrait in this month's issue is no doubt an embodiment of all that could be called beauty. Think of delicate glance, it is there; of affectionate smile, you have it; of rotund face, that is unbeatable. What is more, the effeminate posture, charm and all that is apparently magnetising are present in proportion to make any other adjectives superfluous. And her name is Miss Ngozi Ukeje. Nigerian Universities

—Taking Steps To Generate More Incomes

BY GOFFREY UMEH

ONE of the cardinal aims and objectives for the establishment of universities is to carry out research works into areas of possible development that will benefit the society and mankind as a whole. The means of attaining this goal however varies from one country to another depending on the state policy on higher education but more essentially on the availability of financial resources.

When therefore, Nigeria attained independence in 1960 she inherited and encouraged the development of an all-purpose university system with the government as the major source of revenue. It was only of recent that emphasis has shifted from the all-purpose universities to specialised ones.

It is in view of the country's commitment to join other nations in the technological race, that the present administration established universities of technology.

Like most developing countries, the growth of Nigerian Universities has come to be linked with the rate of flow of grants from the government. For instance when in the first decade of independence the universities were partly under the federal and the then regional governments, these institutions were not experiencing financial strains as is the case today for obvious reasons: the number of universities was small and the economy buoyant.

With the assumption of full responsibility for university education in the early seventies by the previous administration coupled with the increase in the number of universities the demand on available resources outstripped the supply and the trend has remained the same up to the present day.

The plight of the universities has been due to the oil glut in the world market which has resulted in the dwindling government revenue accruing from crude oil sales. All government institutions have had to trim their finances in line with what is available. Moreover, our university administrators have belatedly realised that the tradition of generating revenue by launching endowment appeal funds ends up with fanfare as the amount usually raised falls below expectation.

Perhaps, with this development, the universities now try other avenues of generating revenue to supplement whatever comes from the government. To this end, universities have in the last twelve calendar months embarked on major moves to improve upon their financial resources. The university of Nigeria, Nsukka; the University of Lagos, as well as the Universities of Jos and Port Harcourt to mention just a few have established consultancy services and investment companies. And of course, the university of Ibadan blazed the trail in this.

There is no gainsaying that the schemes would ensure greater participation of universities in national development. One also hopes that the institutions would exploit to their advantage the growing industrial market in the country.

Now that a new chapter in the community-university relationship is being carved, there is a need for the various governments and the private sectors to come to their patronage with the belief that it is our joint responsibility to evolve a university system relevant to our culture and geared towards the problems of our development.

In the long-run, the various projects of the universities will not only generate the much desired revenue but will in fact improve the quality of research, teaching and academic work in general.

There is no doubt that with time, other universities would take similar steps, but it must be emphasised that in the pursuance of this lofty objective, the primary and major roles of universities should not be jettisoned. As rightly observed by the Vice-Chancellor of the university of Lagos, Professor Akin Adesola, while inaugurating the management board of the Institution's Consultancy Services, the nation expects all members of staff in the academic community to remain true to their primary roles in ensuring that teaching and research remain pre-eminent in their priorities, and should under no circumstances be sacrificed on the altar of consultancy services expediency.

TASK BEFORE FEDERAL EXECUTIVE

—Diversification Of Our Economy Advocated

BY EMMAN AKHIGBE

IN the previous analysis, it was observed that adverse economic factors, resulting from global oil glut, created financial difficulty for the government. This financial problem made it impossible for it to complete some of its projects.

From this background, it is therefore clear that the completion of on going projects is a primary task before the federal executive in the next four years. In this regard, the green revolution programme readily comes into focus.

While there is no disputing the fact, that this laudable programme has to some extent been a success, it must be pointed out that much skill remains to be done if the ultimate objective of the programme which is self-sufficiency in food production is to be realised.

At a time for example, when demand for rice outstripped local production which later led to arbitrary increase in price, the federal administration embarked on importation of rice through government agencies. But when government realised that uncontrolled importation of the commodity could easily deplete the nation's foreign exchange, the rate of rice importation was then slowed down and the eleven river basin development authorities ordered to embark on accelerated rice production scheme.

The prompt response led to the implementation of the Itoikin rice project with the assistance of the Chinese government. This step was no doubt a quick response to national demand. But the river basin development authorities also have an urgent need to embark on the massive production of food stuff like beans, garri yams and other perishable food commodities in the next four years.

It is therefore the onerous responsibility of the federal executive to ensure that the problem of food shortage is solved during the next four years.

On housing, the federal executive should ensure the completion of the low cost houses in some states of the federation. As at now many of these houses remain unfinished. This is understandable given the present economic realities of the country.

At this juncture, it is necessary to remind the federal executive that if the tasks ahead like housing, agriculture, education are to be realised, then a major task is for it to endeavour at diversifying the nation's economy for the present dependence on oil as our foreign exchange has been the bane of our economy.

In recent times, the oil glut has taught us a lesson. And that is, that a monocultural economy is susceptible, to the vagaries of the international market. Hence there is now the compelling need to resuscitate the mining of coal, tin, zinc and limestones. Mineral deposit such as uranium must be exploited.

A sustained exploitation of the mineral wealth of this country will no doubt generate new revenue that will enable the federal executive carry out its projects in the next four years.

Our existing industries must be encouraged to be inward looking in their use of raw materials for their products. Foreign investors should be encouraged to move into the more complex areas of industry where imported expertise and technical know how could be harnessed with domestic inputs.

One must not gloss over the present wave of retrenchment and unemployment in the country. It is a task of the federal executive to solve these two socio-economic problems.

Indeed a realistic economic approach and therefore a task ahead of the federal executive in the next four years is to review all the projects either already embarked upon or contemplated with a view to re-examining their costs. As has been suggested by economic experts, priority should be given to revenue yielding projects such as the liquified natural project and flat steel project.

The execution of these tasks require a crop of industrious and dedicated men of honour and impeccable integrity. Men who are performers, strategists and achievers.

That is why president Shahu Shagari's determination to choose on his own those who will execute the tasks ahead in the next four years is most welcome. Indeed a rational choice of these men is the first step towards carrying out the tasks ahead.

Rice field like this contributes immensely to the country's agricultural products.

INDUSTRIAL UNREST

—There's Need For Regular Consultations

BY DENIKUNAJA-BROWNE

RECENTLY the trend in the nation's industrial atmosphere has been increasingly towards trade disputes and strikes. In the past few years the federal government, all the nineteen state governments as well as local governments have had to contend with one strike action or the other. As a matter of fact, no sector of the economy was spared the spate of work stoppages.

These incidents contribute in no small measure to the fallings of the economy and living conditions of the people. For example, in the strategic banking sector, Central Bank workers, because of their pivotal position, virtually crippled the financial market during their trade dispute with government sometime in 1981.

Similarly, the industrial action by members of the Academic staff union of Nigeria Universities nearly paralysed the educational sector because it delayed the resumption of the 1981/82 academic year by more than two months. In the same way, teachers in many states are always on strike.

One could also recall that downing of tools by doctors, nurses and other paramedical staff led to untold hardship for thousands of Nigerians. Also those in essential services like NEPA and water boards had made life difficult for the people.

It is obvious that the cost of these trade disputes and strikes is enormous in terms of man-days lost to the economy. Available statistics show that in 1978, Nigeria lost hundreds of thousands manhours through strike action. The figure has continued to rise steeply since then.

From all this, a disturbing tradition in industrial relations in the country seems to have been born. It has been suggested in various quarters that one of the gravest causes of industrial friction, is the communication gap between management and the labour force. The idea is that when management takes major decisions that affect the workers, they are not consulted and therefore, they show their resentment by downing tools.

What the situation now demands is urgent and concerted action by Federal and state governments, the National Assembly private employers and trade unions.

The governments should give directive to ensure that labour unions are consulted before major decisions are made by management in government establishments. Such a change should also apply in private concerns as well.

Furthermore, employers should show more interest in the welfare and grievances of their workers instead of waiting until labour disputes are declared. Employers should also place more emphasis on fringe benefits such as housing and transportation rather than on salary increases which make little difference to workers comfort due to universal inflation.

On the part of workers, trade union leaders should be reminded that the test of effective leadership does not lie in calling workers out on strike at the slightest excuse. Experience has shown that there is no dispute that cannot be amicably settled through bargaining. And there is no record of any trade dispute that was not settled on the bargaining table.

It is known all over the world that the strike weapon is the most potent one, workers could use in the search for better remunerations and conditions of service. But it is one that should be used when other avenues for seeking redress have been exhausted because in the end both the employer and the workers are the losers since no economy can survive in an unstable atmosphere. Trade union leaders should also be mindful of the existence of established avenues for settling labour disputes in the case of unsuccessful negotiations between management and union leaders.

This makes it all the more appropriate at this time to stress that more than ever before, employers and the labour force should find common ground on which to work together towards industrial peace and harmony.

OCTOBER LECTURES

NIGERIA'S ENERGY SOURCES

—Socio-Economic Implications

BY DR. P. C. ONIANWA

THE October 1983 issue of the Radio/TV Times, carried the profile of Dr. F. C. Onianwa, who was the Guest Speaker of this year's "October Lectures" the launching of which took place on 23 September 1983 at the Conference Hall, National Theatre, Iganmu, Lagos. The theme of the talk to mark the occasion was "Alternative Sources of Energy For Nigeria".

For the benefit of its readers, the Radio/TV Times publishes below the first part of the six radio talks entitled "Existing Sources Of Energy in Nigeria and the Socio-Economic implications of the diminishing energy resources".

Dr. Phillip C. Onianwa is a Ph.D degree holder in Plasma Physics. He is also an Engineer, an entrepreneur, a University Lecturer and a Research Scientist with vast experience in the fields of nuclear physics and engineering. He is 45 years old, married with children.

Each of the remaining five parts of the talks shall be published monthly in subsequent issues.

IN this restive world of ours, plagued with many social and economic problems, the industrialised western world is quick to point at the soaring price of oil as the theme of this year's "October Lectures" therefore couldn't be more appropriate. It underscores the growing awareness in Nigeria as elsewhere in the world of the global energy problem now facing mankind.

It will help set the nation on a thought provoking path, to seek answers to the problems created by the conflicting triple role of our diminishing, non-renewable oil as source of energy, source of raw material for the petrochemical industry and source of badly needed foreign exchange for the country.

In the wake of a massive energy conservation policy and a frantic search for alternative sources of energy by the industrialised world, we in Nigeria must recognise the basic truth that while the importance of oil as a source of energy will steadily diminish like its predecessors coal and fuelwood the value of oil, however, will greatly increase as source of raw material for a thousand other products.

We should therefore join the rest of the world in the frantic search to find for ourselves alternative sources of energy there may be in Nigeria. The choice of the inaugural paper for the "October Lectures" entitled "Alternative Sources of Energy for Nigeria" was therefore made to set the stage for a wide range of relevant topics to be examined in a subsequent series of six Radio Talks.

Today, we are beginning with the first of this series, namely "Existing Sources of Energy in Nigeria and the Socio-economic implications of the diminishing energy resources." In order to avoid any ambiguity which could arise from the word "existing" we have to note that the term "existing sources of energy" could be interpreted either to mean our conventional sources of energy which are fuelwood, coal, oil, gas and hydroelectric power, or to mean all sources of energy available to Nigeria whether they are currently being exploited or not such as those that exist in the ground (geothermal) or as minerals (uranium), in the trees (biomass), in the air (hydrogen), from the sun (solar energy), in the everflowing rivers (hydraulic power) and in the ocean (ocean temperature differences). (Although we shall concentrate on our conventional sources of energy while examining the socio-economic implications of their diminishing existence, yet it will be necessary to first examine the total spectrum of energy resources available to Nigeria, though in a cursory manner. In order to be able to see how the socio-economic consequences of our diminishing energy resources can be effectively influenced by availability of other sources.

The total world inventory of sources of energy can be divided into renewable and non-renewable sources. The non-renewable sources are the cause of our present concern since these sources, as their name suggests, are exhaustible. Once a kilogramme of coal or one barrel of oil or a cubic metre of gas is burnt, it is gone forever and can never be replaced. These sources of energy are therefore described as non-renewable.

The non-renewable sources of energy consist of:

Solid Fossil Fuels, to which the various sub-groups of the coal family belong, namely anthracite, bituminous coal, lignite or brown coal. Peat also belongs to this class of solid fossil fuels.

Coal is derived from plant materials which were deposited in bogs of earlier geological eras. They are present in many sediment bases of the earth organic sedimentary rock in the form of seams or layers. The economically viable coal which we know today were formed from land plants some 350 million years ago, i.e. since the so-called carboniferous era, that was the time that earth's vegetation increased markedly.

Combustible organic rock which originated before this era is of an oil shale nature and is derived from algae. The various processes which turned the plant materials deposited in bogs of carboniferous era either into peat or coal were of biochemical nature. These plant materials which were deposited in bogs of earlier geological eras had their origin from three basic elements: hydrogen, carbon and oxygen.

Some of us will be familiar with the process of photosynthesis whereby plants absorb solar energy which enables them to transform carbon dioxide (CO_2) and water (H_2O) into carbohydrates. That energy absorbed by the plants cannot be destroyed but is stored in the plants because there is a fundamental law of nature which says that energy cannot be destroyed.

The known reserves of both coal and lignite in Nigeria are estimated to be in the order of magnitude of 650 million short tons. Our coal, however is of the sub-bituminous class, i.e. it is of medium quality, is non-coking, susceptible to weathering and does not stand up well to excessive handling. It is however acceptable as boiler fuel.

The so-called hydrocarbons which consist of crude oil and natural gas liquids, natural gas, oil shales and bituminous sands, have their origins also in hydrogen and carbon hence the name "hydrocarbons". Unlike the solid fossil fuels, however, these hydrocarbons exist in either liquid or gaseous state depending on the conditions of temperature and pressure that exist in their deposits.

Oil is a mixture of hydrocarbons that remain liquid under the conditions of temperature and pressure which exist both in their deposits and when they are brought up from their underground deposits to the earth's surface. Oil contains not only compounds containing sulphur, nitrogen, oxygen and heavy metals (vanadium and nickel). The sulphur content can vary from 0.1 to more than 5 per cent by weight.

Our oil is reputed to be of a high class, having a low sulphur content. Assuming a daily production rate of 1.5 million barrels per day, our reserves/production ratio could be in the order of 30 years. If this estimate is correct, it follows that the nation has just 30 more years of rendezvous with oil, provided that the rate of increase of our consumption can be offset by corresponding discoveries of new oil wells.

Natural gas consists of a range of lighter hydrocarbons together with water and impurities. The composition varies considerably from deposit to deposit, the major hydrocarbon being methane. Some of us are familiar with the flare usually seen while flying over oil producing areas of Nigeria. Our gas reserves have even a higher life expectancy than oil. Unfortunately, however, financial constraints have until now delayed better use of our natural gas, 82.4 per cent of which is flared away.

Nuclear energy is distinct from solid fossil fuels or hydrocarbons in the sense that it does not originate from the sun as the others do through photosynthesis. It is derived from uranium by a process of splitting the inner part, i.e. the nucleus, of a uranium atom. The splitting process is known as fission reaction. However, instead of splitting the nucleus of a heavy atom like uranium, we may choose an opposite approach and join the nuclei of two light atoms of hydrogen (deuterium and tritium) to form a helium atom.

In the process, the total mass of the two combined hydrogen atoms (helium) is found to be less than the sum of the masses of the individual hydrogen atoms. According to the celebrated physicist, Albert Einstein, the missing mass is not actually lost in the process of fusion of the two

National Football League

—Far-Sighted Planning Necessary

THE main objective of the National League Football Competition is to promote and uplift the development of football in the country.

The competition in the past years has succeeded in producing many formidable clubs and giant that had represented the country in many international soccer engagements.

In this year's competition, ICC shooting stars of Ibadan is on top of the table with 41 points. It scored a total of 36 goals and conceded 11 with only two defeats—one to a former champion, Rangers International of Enugu and the other to the Mighty Jets of Jos.

On the whole, the club won 12 matches, drew seven and lost two. Altogether, 14 clubs completed in division one, 12 in division two and fifteen in division three.

Already, Moshood Abiodun Babes at Abeokuta and first Bank Football club of Lagos have both qualified for promotion from division two to division one having bagged 31 points each.

The positions of other clubs in division one cannot yet be determined because of the rescheduling of some matches involving New Nigerians Bank Football club of Benin and Rangers International of Enugu.

The outcome of their matches, may eventually alter the placings of some clubs on the table. The matches will show the club in the second position and the ones that will be relegated.

Bendel Insurance of Benin has however been consistent in its matches since the commencement of the competition while Rangers which started poorly later rose to the challenge.

Stationery Stores of Lagos suffered a great blow midway into the league by the two year ban placed on it by the Nigeria Football Association fol-owing the fracas that ensued during their cup winners cup match against Assoc of Ivory Coast.

With ICC's position on the table, it is certain that the club will represent the country in the 1984 African Club Champions competition. However it is noteworthy that Nigeria is yet to win this competitions since its inception.

It will be recalled that the country's best attempt was an appearance in the final in 1975. Ever since our clubs have always being edged out at the quarter or semi-final stages.

ICC which represented the country in 1981 saved out in the quarter final stage while for the past two years the Rangers International could not perform better.

The question then arises, how prepared is ICC shooting stars for the cup that had eluded the country since its inception. Experience has shown that most clubs, after winning the National League which is a prelude to the international engagement, failed to live up to the confidence usually reposed in them by not making any impact in the champions club competition.

As a matter of fact, there is no need winning the national competitions without impressing it on other countries that the standard of soccer in Nigeria is rising.

All these point to the fact that ICC should start the preparation for this competition in earnest and save the country from further degradation in the competition.

In short, Nigeria cannot afford to be relegated from the enviable position it now occupies in the world of sports particularly after the country performance in the just concluded tourist world cup and some other vital matches.

On its part, the Nigeria football Association should as a matter of urgency put right all the administrative problems that has directly affected the National League.

For example, the Association should review some of its rules that ideal with erring clubs in line with modern practice. Any club that involves itself in any act of hooliganism hydrogen atoms, rather the equivalent of this so-called defect mass is released as a tremendous amount of energy.

Similarly, fusion processes are continuously taking place in the sun in form of helium synthesis, i.e. the combination of two hydrogen atoms to form helium resulting in a defect mass being converted into radiant energy which reaches our planet to make possible the processes of wind, waves and photosynthesis which in turn enable formation of solid fossil fuels and hydrocarbons.

To illustrate the virtually limitless nature of a nuclear energy source, one only needs to compare uranium with coal. One pound of the heavy element uranium, contains about three million times the amount of energy contained in a pound of coal. Uranium has been discovered in Nigeria and the Government has created the necessary parasit to exploit the energy rich deposits.

The energy stored in nuclear fuels is virtually limitless, but so too are the problems considered one of the greatest challenges to technology. In order to achieve fusion, scientists have to recreate the extreme conditions which exist in the sun where a highly ionized gas called plasma exists at extreme temperatures.

The initial problems of containing the plasma and maintaining its solar temperatures were reasonably solved while other problems are yet to be overcome in order to make possible commercial application of fusion reactors around year 2000. Once an ounce of uranium is spent in a reactor, it can never be recovered and like coal, oil and gas, uranium is also a non-renewable source of energy.

Hydraulic power is a renewable energy source. All renewable energy sources have a common primary source namely the sun whose radiant energy creates temperature differences in the air which cause winds to flow, rainfall to replenish the flowing rivers and enable photosynthesis.

Biomass is a generic term for all plant matter and its derivatives including residues from forests and crops, animal waste, sewage and organic compounds of municipal and domestic solid waste. Biomass, based on photosynthesis, is the most traditional form of energy stored in plants. This and other renewable sources of energy such as tidal, wave, geothermal and hydraulic power are all caused by action of the sun as the primary source of energy.

We shall now focus our attention on the effects which the diminishing sources of energy would have on our social and economic life before and when they will have been exhausted. Nigeria's traditional source of energy, namely wood fuel, has been receiving relatively little attention in respect of regeneration of this important member of the biomass family, except for tree planting in our semi-arid zones which was only intended to arrest desert encroachment.

The question of reforestation should be vigorously examined in order to prevent the catastrophic consequence of forest depletion. It must be recognised that a worse energy crisis than what obtains in the western world today will be facing Africa unless a deliberate policy of reforestation to enhance the production and availability of fuel wood is pursued.

In the United Nations conference on new and recoverable energy sources which took place in Nairobi, Kenya, in August, 1981, it was indicated that at least 25 million people in Africa cannot obtain sufficient fuel wood and a further 250 million face shortages.

It will be an illusion for us to assume that our vast areas of guinea savanna, tropical rain forest and mangrove swamps will sufficiently meet our future energy requirements when depleted an appreciable portion of these forest reserves now and when our conventional non-renewable sources of energy will have thinned out.

Given that our population is in the order of magnitude of 100 million, it becomes obvious that the rate of forest depletion will be considerably higher than anywhere in Africa should we one day find ourselves in the unenviable position of most African countries deprived of energy supply due to want and poverty. Apart from the lack of fuels, deforestation without appropriate measures to ensure regeneration of the forests will certainly upset the ecological balance and, in addition, enhance desert encroachments.

Two major problems that developing countries are faced with are:

- (1) ability to feed their growing population, and
- (2) ability to meet their energy requirements.

Presently, the nation is paying heavily for having neglected to develop her agriculture. The problems of neglected agriculture would be gravely compounded by diminishing energy supply which will result in a systematic lowering of our standard of living and if we project into the distant future we may even find ourselves returning to man's simpler life of early times, content with the few basic needs of food, water and shelter.

Looking into the immediate future, i.e. some 30 years from now when oil will have been exhausted, to her 650 million short tons of sub-bituminous coal as the main source of energy to fuel her transport and manufacturing industries as well as her thermal power stations.

In order to use coal as fuel for the transport, industry, the nation has to resort to production of the so-called synthetic fuels, such as those developed by German scientists during the second World War when Germany lost her sources of crude oil, first in Rome-

Cross section of students who attended the inaugural part of the lectures.

OCTOBER LECTURES

nia and later in the Urals of the Soviet Union.

In these instances, German scientists retired to the laboratories and came out with aviation fuel made from coal. Later Germany, having lost vast areas of farmland in Czechoslovakia and vast arable lands east of the Oder-Neiser River, German scientists again retired to the laboratories and came out with "butter" made from coal.

This spectacular feat performed by German scientists signifies the triumph of science and engineering over the dependency of a nation in dire need. Nigeria will have to nurture her own scientists in preparation for the formidable energy challenges of the future. The hazards of the coal industry are very high since it has been proved that many hydrocarbons cause skin cancer when contact with coal is prolonged. Coal emissions contribute to lung cancer and other respiratory diseases.

Sulphur compounds which are generated by burning coal cause acid rain which kills aquatic life, stunt vegetation and corrodes structures. It is likely that a boom in coal synthetic fuels in Nigeria will considerably magnify the hazards of the coal industry for coal will still be available long after our oil and natural gas will have been exhausted in that order, leaving us with no alternative than to cope with the health hazards inherent in coal business, until the coal reserves in turn become also completely exhausted.

The main prerequisites for Nigeria's overdue industrial revolution are an adequate energy supply, a viable iron and steel industry, and a widely diversified chemical technology, all backed up by a highly trained and dedicated cadre of scientific and technological manpower similar to the Japanese. Energy is basic to all three prerequisites. Today, science is groping in the dark recesses of nature trying to unveil mysteries while engineering is closely following with scientific applications trying to harness the vast potentialities available to man.

It is indisputable that alternative sources of energy will provide our future energy needs but since the exact point in time when these alternative sources can become feasible remains unknown, it will be necessary for us to set up, within an institutional framework, a national policy of carefully monitoring the non-renewable sources to ensure a judicious management to renewable energy sources, otherwise we may one day wake up to find that the former energy-poor countries of Japan and Europe have turned out to be the future Saudi Arabias, not in oil, however, but in a vast range of alternative sources of energy, including nuclear energy derived by fusion process.

In a world abundant in hydrogen, what will then be required remains brain power and not a reservoir of oil. Similarly, geothermal, solar and biomass, all being renewable sources of energy, will provide abundant energy only to those nations which have developed and perfected the high level of scientific and technological knowledge required to harness these resources.

Without energy our much-talked about industrial and even agrarian revolution will remain a far-fetched dream just as the 18th century industrial revolution of old Europe would not have been possible without coal which supplied energy for the spinning mills and steam locomotive engines.

Our 20th century industrial and agrarian revolutions can draw from the experience of old Europe, thereby we can attempt to bridge the wide gap created by centuries of our industrial backwardness. In the process, we have to draw from the lessons of history and avoid the dehumanising values of the 18th century industrial revolution. We have to correct our distorted value system, reorientate and relate it to our rich cultural heritage.

We have to re-establish moral values which stress loyalty to the nation, arrest our fallen educational standards, uphold the principle of reward based on merit and renounce our slavish dependence on the sinking western economy. These are some of the prerequisites necessary to prepare our minds for the task of building the nation by way of technological development. The Japanese did it; why can't we?

In fact, we are already beginning to experience some of these social and economic ills which will only assume astronomical dimensions as our energy resources continue to diminish. Unemployment will soar. Social unrest will increase as more economic recovery measures are intensified and society will tend to polarise more and more into "haves" and "have-nots", and the contradictions inherent in our society will sharpen up with their destabilising effect. The unemployed mind is the devil's workshop: crime rate will rise, traditional values will be thrown aboard and the massive drift of the population to urban areas in search of livelihood will be intensified.

Labour unrest will be the order of the day and the nation will have turned into a fertile ground for revolutionary agitations. In the ever increasing turmoil that will follow, it will not be long when we shall have lost our sense of direction as a nation, unable to come to grips with our socio-economic problems. What follows thereafter is anybody's guess.

before, during and after any match should be made to play the next two successive matches in a virtually empty stadium.

As a further punishment, the affected club should be made to pay what should have been the average gate takings that should have accrued to the NFA and their opponents if the match had been played with crowd in the arena. Also firm measures should be taken to discourage as well as deal with the insistence of clubs to win their half matches by hook or crook.

The NFA should make their communication network more efficient to enhance the immediate release of results of matches. In the final analysis, it will be necessary for all clubs in the country to comply with the directives of the NFA that clubs without junior side will not be registered for the next season.

This will once and for all eradicate the incidence of rescheduling a match because a club is involved in an international competition. Clubs will now have a larger number to select from and can adequately assemble team even when the club is involved in any international match.

This is what nations well-known for their successes on the field of play do. Nigeria too stands to gain by this far-sighted planning.

INSURANCE INDUSTRY

—Its Role In National Development

By Gbenga Onayiga

THE Insurance Industry constitutes an essential part of a nation's economic system. It provides a means of ensuring ultimate survival of commercial and industrial organisations, instead of their liquidation in the event of unforeseen hardships. It also provides indemnity to individuals against losses of property or death. Insurance covers are done in return for regular payments known in the industry as premiums.

Unfortunately, in society, the benefits derivable from the scheme are recognised and appreciated by a few. Many people are inclined to believe that one cannot enjoy these benefits immediately or may never enjoy them. Hence, most of those taking insurance covers do so just because it is made mandatory by one law or the other.

Examples of these are the motor vehicle insurance and the marine insurance on cargo imports into the country, which the Insurance Acts of 1976 provides, should be placed among insurance companies registered in Nigeria.

To intimate the public with the role of the industry in our society, a full scale public enlightenment campaign should be embarked upon. It needs scarcely be emphasised that the necessity for such an exercise is long overdue. This is more so when it is viewed against the background that a lot of people in the country today show nonchalant attitude towards insurance due to lack of knowledge of the advantages of taking an insurance cover for themselves and their property. The unscrupulous activities of some insurance companies also account for this distrust of the industry by the public.

There is no doubt that an effective public relations exercise by those engaged in insurance business will go a long way in enlightening members of the public about the services provided by the industry.

At the same time, it will disabuse their minds of the erroneous impression that insurance companies are easy to deal with only when receiving premiums but become very elusive when it becomes necessary for them to pay genuine claims to their clients.

In this regard, it is just as well that a resolution to sponsor programmes on the subject of insurance on the Radio and Television was adopted at last year's educational conference of the Insurance Institute of Nigeria.

In the same vein, the institute may consider publishing more books, magazines and journals dealing with various aspects of insurance. Again, it is appropriate to emphasise the need for insurance companies to write the terms of agreement in a more down-to-earth language to enable their clients understand them. Efforts of the insurance industry to improve its dented image, will be more effective if it enjoys the active co-operation of the mass media the government as well as the clients.

On the part of the clients, one must stress the importance of making genuine claims on the insurance companies. This is because, the issue of fraudulent claims is one of the problems confronting the industry. It is therefore essential to appeal to the clients to ensure that their claims are genuine because to do otherwise is to create a bad image not only for themselves but also for the insurance house. On the other hand, the insurance companies themselves should make it a point of duty to always fulfil their contractual obligations.

The Federal Government has already taken some active interest in the insurance business. Not only has it issued guidelines for the industry but it has also gone into the business. This no doubt, is very encouraging.

Nevertheless, there is still need for the government to be more involved in insurance in view of the rapid technological growth of the country and the realisation that many of the privately-owned insurance companies do not have the resources to take on enormous risks. This is, therefore, the time to set in motion the necessary machinery to put the insurance industry in its rightful place.

A car badly damaged in head-on collision with a motor cycle, an Insurance policy may cover such an accident.

OUR RATE CARD

For Your Effective Advertising

AFTER years of quiet circulation during which a systematic study was undertaken to ascertain readers' tastes and advertisers' requirements, we are proud to present today a magazine which, we hope, has successfully translated into form your highly esteemed ideas and suggestions.

The current editions of RADIO/TV TIMES reveal a history of steady progress and improvement in quality, standard and scope. In fact there is every ground now for one to say "Oh Yes! The RADIO/TV TIMES has made it" We are not stopping at that either.

We have more reasons than many a publisher to cry over "INFLATION" and rising production costs. But where "Satisfaction First" (for readers and advertisers) is the over-riding principle, profit occupies only the next place in our policy.

This explains why, in spite of the extremely keen competition in the field of commercial advertising, RADIO/TV TIMES can still afford to accept advertisement at a rate below one kobo to reach one thousand readers. What is more, when you consider the aggregate positive effect of an advertisement in RADIO/TV TIMES, supplementing your combinations on radio and television, the resultant massive impact is quite obvious.

The advertisement rates tabulated below took effect from 1st of April, 1977. We look forward to your substantial patronage as soon as possible, while assuring you of prompt satisfaction always.

i. THE JOURNAL: The "Radio/TV Times" is the monthly programme journal covering all the radio and television stations, published by the Federal Radio Corporation. The journal is now 28 years old on the market. As a supplementary guide to programmes' schedule, the readership of this journal is understandably tied up with the radio and television audience — a well balanced cross-section of the society, representative of all ages, sexes, income brackets, intellectual levels and tastes. That the current size of this audience has grown into millions is now common knowledge.

Apart from highlighting Radio/TV programmes, the journal seeks to generate public interest in healthy social events, as well as local, national and international issues, with emphasis on Africa. But while taking in its strides the wide range of programmes offered by the radio and television, "Radio/TV Times" is breaking new grounds of its own to embrace a wider range of interests in order to provide greater satisfaction for its ever expanding readership.

Public demand for "Radio/TV Times" in recent times has been so extensive that the possibility of stepping up the current circulation in stages to keep pace ultimately with the radio and television audience is being actively explored.
