Don't Increase Price

KINDLY allow me a space to express my views on Mr Aloysius Ndunseri's letter asking for an increase in the price of Radio/TV, Times.

I am sorry to say that Mr Aloysius is not being practical in his suggestion. There are many readers like me who can't afford to buy a copy of this informative journal every month even when it is only 20k. Mr Aloysius is not speaking the minds of the poor readers who manage to buy this journal every month.

I therefore suggest on behalf of poor ones like me, that the price of 20k per copy be retained.

Why Only Girls For Cover?

I AM SURPRISED that the editor of the Radio/TV, Times only finds the pictures of those within his organisation suitable for covers.

Does it mean that only photographs of the girls working in your Corporation are fascinating and attractive for covers? There are a thousand and one of such attractive faces outside that can best be used as covers.

For example the pictures of the current Miss Nigeria or better still the pictures of her runners-up are attractive enough for covers. You can also make use of the pictures of companies beauty contest winners instead of boring your readers with pictures of the girls working in FRCN.

Tam Aqhani
Ikeja.

THANKS for your observation Mr Aqhani. It is not correct to say that only photographs of FRCN girls are attractive or suitable for covers. We publish and are ready to publish other suitable photographs outside the FRCN. However, your advice is noted and we shall continue to bring you more attractive cover pictures.

Buka Connection To Stay

I HOPE you will publish this article which theme is directed to an article in the November issue of Radio-TV Times, "Letter Page". The article was written by Enyi De. In it, he requested that "BUKA CONNECTION" FRC - 2 be deleted.

First and foremost, before Enyi asks for the deletion of the programme, he should know that FRC - 2 deals mostly with music. He should also note that FRC - 2 is not meant only for dishing out explosive sounds of modern taste but also to promote our indigenous music which forms the nucleus of today's music.

Furthermore, he should know that FRC - 2 exists to serve the nation and not a class of people. "LUNCH BREAK" I believe is meant for those lunching in modern restaurants while "BUKA CONNECTION" is for "BUKATERIAS" who are made up of local people.

Citizen Enyi should have been fair enough by asking for the reduction of the two hours allotted to this programme to at least an hour. Whatever Enyi thinks, "BUKA CONNECTION", I suggest, must stay.

Remove That Sign-Tune

SINCE the "FRCN Mail-Bag" was scrapped recently, listeners no longer have the opportunity of expressing their views on FRCN programmes.

Whoever thought of replacing the sign-tune of "What the People Say" aired on Saturdays with a repeat on Sundays, must have made a big mistake. The present one is nothing less than a child's play. Please bring back the old sign-tune, or if it can no longer be found, give us the programme without the music.

I also seize the opportunity to commend the FRCN Parliamentary correspondents - Clement Akintomide and Ola Gholahan for taking listeners right into the National Assembly. More grease to your elbows.

And finally, I appeal to the editor of Radio - TV Times to please re-introduce "Faces From The Studies" as this column brings face-to-face those artistes and producers who help dish out programmes.

OCTOBER LECTURES

Industrial Research, Oshodi

-Its' Establishment, Structure And Activities

THE THIRD of the six lectures of Dr. Koleoso was published in the January issue of RADIO/TV Times. In it, the lecturer treated readers to Government's policy on technological take-off in the direction of education and manpower development.

The fourth talk, the text of which is produced below, gives a clear view on the set-up and progress made so far by the Federal Institute of Industrial Research, Oshodi, of which the lecturer himself is a Director.

IN THIS fourth talk, I would like to high-light the activities of the Federal Institute of Industrial Research, Oshodi with reference to its contributions to the technological development of Nigeria.

This is not to say, however, that others such as the Agricultural, Industrial and Medical Research Institutes have not contributed their quota to the technological development of the country. For example, various agricultural research institutes have discovered more pest-resistant and faster-growing varieties of seeds as well as new vaccines that can bring far-reaching changes in the dairy and poultry industries in the country. The Project Development Institute at Enugu, otherwise known as PRODA, has also acquired ceramics and glass technology in addition to the design and manufacture of some small-scale processing equipment.

Let me now give you a brief history of the Federal Institute of Industrial Research. The institute (then known as Institute of Applied Research) was established in 1956 on the basis of a report, by the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (IBRD), which recommended its establishment as one of the three vital institutions required to sustain Nigeria's industrialisation programme.

The remaining two vital institutions also recommended for establishment are the Nigerian Industrial Development Bank and the Nigerian Security Printing Company. These two institutions as we all know had been established.

The primary objective of the Institute, as spelt out in 1956, was "to quicken the pace of industrialisation of Nigeria through research into industrial uses of local resources, development of indigenous technologies, and routine services in industries." Other objectives are:

To identify and characterise local raw materials for use in industry and to identify the processes which can be used most effectively to convert them.
To carry out pilot scale trials of processes found in the laboratory to be technically feasible and
To calculate, by means of larger-scale tests and other methods the probable viability such processes if established on a commercial scale.

For 21 years, the Institute was under the Federal Ministry of Industries as one of its departments. In 1977 the Institute along with other research institutes was transferred as a semi-autonomous institute under the newly established National Science and Technology Development Agency (NSTDA).

The functions of the Institute were reviewed and spelt out in the NSTDA decree 1977 which states, among others, that "The Federal Institute of Industrial Research shall conduct research in industrial materials and processes to pilot plant stages, including engineering design, development and fabrication and shall in particular conduct research into —

Nutritional quality of local foodstuffs and their suitability for industrial processing
Processing of local foodstuff of economic importance
Processing of local woods for pulp and paper making and other uses Processing of textile materials and other solid based minerals for industrial use including the development of ceramic, glass and mineral technology; mechanical engineering including engineering design fabrication, machining and other processes; economic evaluation of industrial research results to establish their viability in industrial projects; technical, analytical and consultancy services for existing and planned industries and any other related matters as may be determined from time to time by the Agency".

Later in January 1980, the Institute, along with other Research Institutes, was again transferred to the newly established Federal Ministry of Science and Technology while the NSTDA was dissolved. The functions of the Institute, however, remain unchanged.

The Institute's day-to-day activities are controlled by the Research Director who is responsible to the Governing Board. He is assisted by an Assistant Director and Chief Research Officers.

The Institute recruits staff from a wide range of disciplines and cadres. The Research and Technical Staff consist of Chemists, Biochemists, Microbiologists, Food Scientists and Technologists, Ceramic Scientists and Technologists, Textile Scientists and Technologists, Paper Technologists, Engineers (Mechanical, Electrical, Chemical and Electronic), Analysts, Toxicologists, Pharmacologists, Librarians, Documentalists, Economists, Market Research Scientists and Artisans in various fields.

For easy administration, the Institute has eight divisions.

These are:

- Food Science and Technology Division
- Applied Biology Division
- Material Science Division
- Analytical and Industrial Chemistry Division
- Engineering Division
- Industrial Analysis Division
- Library, Information and Documentation Division and Production and Marketing Division.

The past research efforts of the Federal Institute of Industrial Research appeared in our "Publication List". It is not possible in this talk to list all the publications by staff members. As of now they have written 33 Technical Memoranda, 55 Research Reports and many more publications in reputable journals, and conference papers. The subjects of some of these notable publications are:

The preservation and bottling of palm wine, which was published in 1957

Some inexpensive improvements in village scale, gari making in 1958

Gari Pilot plant (1 ton/day) in 1962

Studies on the suitability of Nigerian raw materials for paper making - I - Gmelina Arborea in 1962

Brick making characteristics of Nigerian clays in 1967. Technical and economic feasibility of a kaolin refining industry in Nigeria in 1968

The development of soy-ogi in 1970 and Techno-economic feasibility of small scale distillation of potable spirits from palm wine in 1974.

Some of these research findings have been commercialised while others have reached the pilot production stage.

The current activities of the Federal Institute of Industrial Research include research and development of products and processes based on local raw materials, upgrading of indigenous technology; training workshops on technologies developed in the Institute (eg. on Baking Technology using developed composite flour, and on preservation and bottling of palm wine).

The institute also provides industrial exposure to students from various Universities, Colleges of Technologies and Polytechnics under the Industrial Training Fund (ITF) and NYSC - programmes and Consultancy services.

The following programmes are currently being carried out in the Institute using the task-force system:-

- Cereals Technology
- Roots and Tubers technology
- Industrial Waste utilisation
- Vegetable oils and fats
- Flavours and Essences
- Ceramics Technology
- Microflora of Nigerian fermented foods
- Fruits and Vegetables
- Market Research of Technical and Industrial Information in Nigeria as well as design and fabrication of simple equipment.

Research and Development activities are carried out under three phases. The first phase consists of extensive literature, market survey on the project and the documentation of these findings in a technical memorandum. The second phase consists of actual experimentation and the write-up of a Research Report; while the third phase consists of pilot plant investigations, market study, economic viability studies and a write up of feasibility report.

In spite of its wide ranging activities, the Institute has its own share of problems - problems such as:-

- Inadequate laboratory space
- Inadequate engineering space
- Inadequate infrastructural facilities in the engineering division
- Inadequate infrastructural facilities in the laboratory.
- Accommodation problems for staff
- Difficulty in recruiting and retaining most of the capable staff owing to attractive salary structure and lack of basic incentives and slow up-take of developed technologies by Nigerians.

The prospects of finding solutions to some of these problems are good, provided the Institute continues to receive financial and moral support from the Government to complete and equip the buildings under construction and carry out the development of basic infrastructure which can otherwise be a cog in the wheel of progress. The solution to the problem of uptake of developed technology is a complex one which should involve not only the Institute but also Nigerians as a whole.

In its future activities, the Institute intends to place emphasis on food research. This is in conformity with the government's objective on 'Green Revolution'. The Institute will also increase the tempo on chemical and engineering technology using local materials.

The engineering unit of the Federal Institute of Industrial Research, needs a lot of revamping. Its major role, so far, has been that of maintenance. There is need to re-orientate the Engineering Unit towards research and development in the areas of mechanical, electrical and electronics engineering. To achieve this there is need for recruitment and training of appropriate manpower at various levels.

The Engineering Division when well staffed and fully equipped has to develop its infrastructure in the area of foundry, moulding, forging, design and fabrication of prototypes and pilot-scale equipment needed to solve local problems and adaptation of imported machinery to suit local conditions. In the area of electronics, the Engineering Division has to look into acquisition of technology to manufacture electronics components, design and manufacture of simple electronic equipment controls and acquire capability for printed circuit and its utilisation.

In anticipation of an increasing tempo of industrialisation in the country during this decade, it is also the intention of the Institute to intensify research into the utilisation of industrial wastes which otherwise would constitute environmental problems and health hazards to the public.

The consultancy services, offered by the Institute, utilised, possibly due to the fact that very few people know of the existence, quality and type of services available at the Institute. Another reason for the poor utilisation of our consultancy services might be the fact that, in the past, most of the industries are the multinationals which do not require or patronise local consultancy services.

However, this picture is likely to change as more Nigerians move from the traditional merchandising business into manufacturing. The Institute therefore has to be prepared to meet these new challenges. The only way it can do this, is through adequate facilities and manpower.

Education Syllabuses Tailored To Reflect Nigeria's Needs

By Our Correspondent

THE decision to restructure technical education in the country to make it reflect the nation's goal of producing enough manpower was announced by the Minister of Education, Dr. Ikechukwu Madubuike at the conference of the National Association of Principals in Calabar.

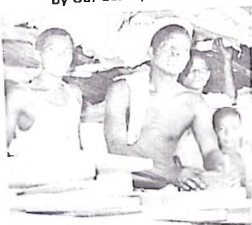

As a first step in this new arrangement, technical colleges and vocational institutions throughout the federation are to draw up new academic curricula which are more flexible, adaptable and better inclined towards skills training.

This development emphasises the need for producing new syllabuses at all levels of education in Nigeria, taking into consideration the country's needs, aspirations and objectives. Our educational system should be thoroughly restructured in order to make it really functional. Many people have in fact suggested that our education system has placed too much emphasis on paper qualifications without due consideration for preparing the child for practical service as against white collar jobs.

Although 20 years after independence, we badly need sufficient manpower for technological development, our educational system has left us to a great extent dependent on skilled labour from abroad in many fields.

To reflect our need for skilled manpower, training in the use of the hands and practical application of talents should be given priority in schools' curricula so as to ensure that the child is adequately prepared to render truly creative service.

There had been instances in the past when the display of ingenuity on the part of any pupil outside the formal syllabus were either not encouraged even when recognised, or treated as a wayward departure from an approved course of study. This was because of the fear that such children could fail in the examinations set on the established syllabus. The fault about this attitude was that there was no conscious effort to identify and help to develop talents. Among our youths that are proficient in such skills as carving, carpentry, weaving, pottery and mechanical occupations, the development of these talents would definitely create a society of practical and useful citizens.

The Federal Government really set the ball rolling sometime ago, by setting up a National Advisory Council on Education for citizenship with the aim of reviewing the role of our educational institutions in producing good citizens.

The West African Examinations Council had also made attempts to review the syllabuses of secondary schools to reflect changing trends in West Africa. For example, subjects like British Constitution, which have no bearing on our environment, have been dropped from the curricula as examination subjects. Some higher institutions of higher learning have also made practical field work an integral part of the course system.

A practical demonstration of the Federal Government's interest in the application of science and technology to development will help greatly in the establishment of the new Ministry of Science and Technology. But this objective can only be realised if the educational system is reorganised from the grassroots in such a way that emphasis in the curricula is placed on teaching pupils to use their talents in a practical way on the farm, on electronics, woodworks, ironworks, on machines and in the kitchen.

If this is done side-by-side with the acquisition of knowledge in the arts and sciences, Nigeria will be able to produce a generation of educated citizens who are thirsty for more knowledge and more challenging creative works.

The comprehensive school system has become more popular than the typical Grammar School system because it offers students wider opportunity for the development of talents.

A purposeful educational system also takes note of the priorities of the society. For example, in this country where agriculture is the mainstay for the economy, it is unpardonable for any educated Nigerian not to be reasonably conversant with farming principles after going through primary, secondary and university education.

Education therefore, should build the citizen not only as an economically useful entity, but also as a morally sound and patriotic member of the society.

VEHICLE ASSEMBLY INDUSTRY

Government Effort To Improve The Country's Economy

By Opeyemi Iyiola

THE FEDERAL Government recently issued guidelines on the establishment of Assembly and an eventual Manufacturing Plant for Light Commercial vehicles in the country. The Minister of Industries Mallam Adamu Ciroma explained that the Government had decided to encourage the assembly of those vehicles in the country in view of the increasing demand and the size of the Nigerian and ECOWAS markets for them.

THESE new guidelines are, of course, testimony to the efforts being made by the present administration to improve the transport industry in the country. Nigeria, like most other countries, relies, heavily on road transport in fulfilling several economic functions. As we are all aware, the automotive industry is vital to the transport industry in particular and the nation's economy in general. At present, there are two passenger car assembly plants in the country. They are Peugeot Automobile Nigeria Limited and Volkswagen of Nigeria Limited. There are in addition four commercial vehicle plants developed during the Third Development plan period. All these have started producing two ranges of vehicles — cars and trucks.

However, between these two ranges of vehicles are what are generally referred to as Light Commercial Vehicles. They are versatile and could serve both as passenger and commercial vehicles. There is little wonder then why there has been great demand for this category of vehicles. Records show that the demand increased greatly in the mid-seventies and that in 1977, a total of over 55,000 units were sold. Even though the demand dropped in 1978 to about 46,000 units, the growth recorded within the past two years, attaining about 50,000 mark, underscores the need for the development of local capacity for producing the light commercial vehicles.

It must be emphasised that the existing level of vehicle assembly in the country has not only made such vehicles available in large quantity but also at relatively cheaper costs. Only last year, the Peugeot Automobile Nigeria Limited in Kaduna increased its production from 160 to 240 cars a day. The expansion project which cost 14 million Naira was designed to enable the Plant reach its maximum annual production of 56,400 cars. The price of each car was also simultaneously reduced. For instance, the provisional price of 504 Saloon A/C went down from 6,600 Naira to 6,015 Naira while that of 504 GL Saloon which stood at 8,900 Naira was reduced to 7,380 Naira.

One problem in Nigeria in connection with local industrial establishment is the quality of some of the goods produced. For instance, there have been complaints about some vehicles assembled in this country such as complaints range from those concerning door fittings to other serious deficiencies. In this connection, special precaution has been taken, foreign manufacturers who will be largely responsible for the technical and economic performance of the proposed industry will be required to have a stake in the establishment so as to assure Government of their commitment to the successful operation of plant.

The Federal Government has given the recent directive not only to promote consumption of home-made products but also to provide more employment opportunities for Nigerians, with the overall aim of attaining a healthier economy for the nation. It is therefore important that these foreign manufacturers draw up adequate training programmes before and after commencement of adequate training programmes before and after commencement of operations for Nigerians who will eventually assume managerial and technical responsibilities. Indeed, this approach should facilitate the process of transfer of technology to Nigerians.

The foreign manufacturers are expected to give every possible administrative and technical assistance to interested local parts manufacturers and at the same time encourage their traditional overseas suppliers to establish local support facilities in Nigeria.

Besides the assurance given by the Federal Government that whatever assembly plants are finally approved, will be located in different parts of the country, conforms with the present administration's policy of disposal of industries.

It is therefore imperative for all Nigerian industrialists interested in the automotive industry on the one hand and the foreign light commercial vehicle manufacturers on the other, to join hands with Government in laying a strong foundation for the development of light commercial vehicle industry as yet another step towards Nigeria's economic self-reliance.

MUSIC REVIEW

CHRISTY ESSIEN

Most Endearing Artiste And Singer

AFTER waiting for some months, Christy Essien returns to serious stage entertainment. Though she had won a nationwide acclaim as Nigeria's queen of songs, she had, nevertheless, passed the point-of-no return, whereby she could play safe.

Following several replays, her album — "Give Me A Chance" has emerged the best out of her four earlier albums, just as "Fantasy" has enabled Carole King to cast off the over-arranged syrupy strings that usually begged her natural progression. It appears to have succeeded in lifting Christy into a new plateau of positive communication.

In a conscious effort to maintain continuity of mood, it seems there is no significant break between songs, but it all works out fine. One other significant point which Christy stressed in her album is the present situation in Nigeria, how a one-time peaceful Nigeria has been plagued with conflict and turmoil. All these Christy has endeavoured to reflect in her album.

Perhaps the whole key to Christy's seeming revitalisation, as it were, lies in her musical prologue in the album, especially in the motives behind the composition of the songs, Give Me A Chance, "Rumours", "Nobody Can Stop You", "Ife" (Yoruba), "Don't Let Me Down", "Onwu" (Igbo), "Saboteurs", and "Ikan Idomo" (Efik). Besides, there is clearly a sense of maturity and wisdom in the selection of the songs and track-arrangement which, as a matter of interest, were jointly done by Christy and Eddie, her husband. "Rumours" and "Saboteurs" connote a plea for understanding, and perhaps in a more individualistic sense, a revealing into need personal security. The title track itself "Give Me A Chance" is likely to be a widely requested/aired extract and, in time, will probably be adopted by Women's Lib.

While "Nobody Can Stop You" and "Don't Let Me Down" say it all in their peculiarly thought-provoking manner, there are other albums like "Onwu", "Ife" and "Ikan Idomo" sung in Ibo, Christy Essien in action.

Yoruba and Efik respectively, which if released as Singles in certain specific states of the country, will earn Christy a lot of money and fame.

Though a low-key performer, there is a subtle intensity about her music on "Give Me A Chance" which will prevent even the most laid-back listener from nodding out. A great deal of the success of this album can be attributed to Christy's unobtrusive string and horn arrangements.

Christy Essien, at her best, can be a most endearing artist, and surely "Give Me A Chance" is one of her finest albums.

XMAS PARTY FOR DISABLED

THE LOVE at Xmas, the spirit of extending goodwill to others got Women and Children's Unit, some ten years ago, into holding Xmas parties for the not-so-privileged children in our midst.

The yearly rounds covered places like the Royal Orthopaedic Hospital, Igbobi; Children's Hospital, Massey Street, Lagos; The S. O. S. Children's Village, Isolo; the Atunda Olu School, Surulere and others.

This year the ground shifted to the Child Care and Treatment Home School, Akoka with the Band of the Pacelli School for the Blind in attendance. Altogether about 300 children with representations from the National Council of Women Societies, the International Women's Society and the Federal Ministry of Social Development, Youth, Sports and Culture, attended.

There were plenty to eat and drink from the gifts and donations presented by the following organisations and bodies:—

Federal Institute of Industrial Research, Oshodi; Niger Biscuits Com-
