Repeat TV Drama

PLEASE allow me space in your Magazine to say something that I think will benefit many people.

I pay attention to the programme FOR BETTER FOR WORSE usually shown on NTV Lagos every Monday at 9.45 p.m and WINDS AGAINST MY SOUL shown on Wednesdays at 10.00 p.m.

I suggest that these programmes be repeated on Saturdays and Sundays respectively to replace FAMILY HOUR at 4.00 p.m. on Saturdays and FROM OUR ARCHIVES at 2.00 on Sundays.

This way, anybody who misses the programmes during the week days will have the opportunity to watch them on weekends.

Felix Olufemi Owoeni
Shomolu,
Lagos.

WHAT'S REALLY WRONG?

NTV IBADAN will always remain the No 1 station because in my opinion, it is the only station, so far that keeps me awake every evening.

I observe that NTV Lagos seems to have succeeded in taking away interesting and exciting programmes which would have earned the station good reputation. As if that is not enough, the few programmes which viewers have resigned themselves to watch in the evenings are either repeats or being cut off suddenly. The next voice one hears is "sorry we can not continue with that programme."

What is really wrong with the station?

Adeola Akanbi,
Ikeja.

Press Review in Yoruba

MAY I seize this opportunity to express my concern about the programme WHAT THE PAPERS SAY. In fact this programme is enjoyed only by people who can read and understand the English language. Our aged parents who wish to enjoy it as well cannot understand the words.

I suggest that this programme be translated into Yoruba after the news in Yoruba on Saturdays after the 9.30 p.m. news on NTV Ibadan.

Agege Lagos.

Thanks for 'Take A Trip'

MAY I through this medium express my sincere thanks to NTV Lagos Channel 10 for yet introducing another interesting programme. MAKE A TRIP.

As a fan of this programme I have observed that it seems to be only men's affair. I also think that the time allotted to it is rather short — 40 minutes. More women should be invited to participate in it and the programme time increased to at least one hour.

My special thanks goes to the producer, Uncle Deinde Gilbert and the usual host, Mr. Segun Sofowote for making the programme an interesting one. I am proud of you all and more grease to your elbows.

TAKE QUICK STEP PLEASE

THE Radio/TV Times series do not be well circulated in the part of the State — Akure. Had not been that I have the opportunity of getting it to read through a friend who is your subscriber would have got none. Hardly I see any vendor hawking it here. May be that you make no arrangement for general distribution here.

Now that the Magazine carries educational items and features as well as arresting pictures, it would be necessary if quick arrangement is made for its distribution in Akure, Ondo State.

If this is done, you can be rest assured of higher sales in this State.

Day Banji
Akure.

Thanks for your observation and words of advice. You can get a copy of the Magazine from your or any Vendor at Akure, because our distribution network covers Ondo State. Should you still find it difficult to obtain one, please become a subscriber by writing to our Commercial Manager at the address in the Magazine.

INADEQUATE TIMING

AS a subscriber to the Radio-TV Times, I have been following all the programmes with keen interest. I would however wish to crave the indulgence of the Producer, TALK BACK on the timing of the programme.

In as much as I would have commended the NTV Lagos, Channel 10 for a job well done by introducing TALK BACK in their programmes with the aim of reading the viewers' minds on all their programmes and to adjust where necessary, the inadequacy of time allotted to the programme is causing a great concern to the viewers.

On several occasions, six or more letters will be purportedly read and commented on by Bode Alalade. Before replying the writer of the first letter, the programme would be interrupted and the next to be heard from the Announcer would be, "we regret our inability to continue with TALK BACK owing to Network programme. We are now linking with Network to bring you NTA Drama production from one of our sister stations". One would have thought that before the programme was brought to the screen, adequate timings should have been allotted to the programme and the time this programme is also brought to the viewers on the screen should have been before the Network News on any day of the week. This would enable many viewers to have the opportunity of watching and thereby appraising the programme. It is pertinent to say that majority of the viewers would have been on bed by the time this programme is brought on the screen.

The authority concerned has an option, either they do proper timing of the slot or they swap the Interlude Time with TALK BACK.

I will wish that the timing be modified to suit viewers.

LOVELY PICTURE

AS a regular reader of the Radio/TV Times, may I state that I like the cover picture of the June 1969 issue of the magazine.

Apart from serving as a feeder for the eye, the Dame by the microphone on the cover was quite lovely and her dress a superb exhibition of our culture.

She looks really gorgeous in that locally woven "Aso Oke".

It is anybody's guess that her projecting stance and beauty would have boosted the sales of the magazine.

BIRTH OF THE SECOND REPUBLIC

Map of Nigeria showing
States and their capitals.

AFTER 13 years of military rule Nigerians are, this month, witnessing the birth of the Second Republic with a democratically elected government under the Presidential System. The Radio/TV Times salute all Nigerians for their dedication and hard-work that have made possible the journey to this all-important milestone. We congratulate the first Executive President of our Great Nigeria. We salute all the elected members of the various arms of government for their good fortune of being chosen to serve the country at higher levels. We exhort those who lost in the elections to serve this nation loyally in any other areas of endeavour. Nigeria and Nigerians appreciate the dedication and devotion of the armed forces personnel who gave their energy and lives to put right the affairs of this country and in handing-over the reins of government to the people. Let us remind those elected, of the trust and enormous responsibility the people of this country have placed on them. It is our hope that they will realise that their primary duty and allegiance lie with Nigeria and Nigerians in the first instance. Because throughout the electioneering campaigns they promised the people of this country many good things of life and none of these included tearing the country assunder. They should remember that there is need for developing and improving various infrastructures and services in Nigeria. They are or should be conscious of the right of every citizen to excellent health care; to gainful employment; right to be well fed, clothed and sheltered; right to education, security of life and property realising that provisions are made for all these basic necessities of life in the new Constitution.

It is, therefore, incumbent on all of them not to lose sight of these important aspects of their responsibilities especially in the heat of debates in the House. This country has the resources, human and material, to be truly self-reliant and take her rightful place in the world's comity of nations, however, our future is in our hands, the elected and the electorate alike, to make this happen. Now is our chance to build a nation truly great; a nation where no one is oppressed. Whatever mistakes might have been made in the past let them be those that would gear us to the realisation that they are meant to serve as lessons to perform lofty deeds in the service of the nation and for the well-being of all.

Nigeran Political History

AS Nigeria moves into the second Republic this month with her new Constitution based on the Presidential system of Government, there is the need to have a cursory review of the gradual constitutional development of the country from the colonial era, to the period of amalgamation, Richards' and Macpherson constitutions right through to independence in 1960, the first Republic, to the Military regimes and now to the Second Republic.

In the year 1861 the British established the Westminster form of Government in Nigeria after King Dosunmu ceded the island of Lagos and the adjacent coastal area to the British Government. In 1885 the Berlin Conference acknowledged the British Protectorate over the Niger District. In 1906, the Crown Colony of Lagos was administratively united with the protectorate of Southern Nigeria but with both north and south still being separately administered. On January 1, 1914, both North and South were amalgamated to form the Colony and Protectorate of Nigeria with Sir Frederick Lugard as its first Governor.

Although unification took place since 1914, separate internal legislative facilities were maintained until 1947 for Lagos Township, the South and North. While in the South and Lagos Township advisory legislative councils existed, legislative powers were being vested only in the Governor in the North.

The situation continued till 1946 when a new Constitution came into being which laid the groundwork for the present Federal structure. The new Constitution was known as the Richards' Constitution. The document established a Legislative Council which for the first time had legislative powers and majority of Africans as non-official members. Representative Houses of Assembly were also established which divided the country into three regions — the North, West and East and a House of Chiefs was also established for the North.

In 1948, Sir John Stuart Macpherson succeeded Lord Milverton as the Governor. The need to review the Constitution later arose in 1949, and in 1951 the Constitution known as Macpherson Constitution received the Royal assent and thus it was revised to provide expanded powers to the Regions, to maintain the unity of Nigeria and serve the best interests of the country.

The reviewed Constitution also gave Nigeria a Central Legislature known as the House of Representatives and a Central Executive Council known as the Council of Ministers.

On both Federal and Regional levels, there were legislative, executive and judicial branches of government. While the Federal Government consisted of Federal House of Representatives, the Federal Executive consisted of the Governor General, as President, Chief Secretary, the Financial Secretary and the Attorney General.

The 1954 Nigerian Constitution came again under review by another series of Conferences held in Lancaster House, London. After plenary sessions the body met again between May and June 1957. On March 26 of the same year, the House of Representatives passed a resolution regarding Federal Independence in 1959 in which Regional Premiers submitted similar memorandum on the issue of independence for the Federation. But the Secretary of State suggested that the Federal Independence could and should be granted to Nigeria in 1960.

Thus, the Federation of Nigeria was duly granted full self-government on October 1, 1960. This was the first Republic before the army took over in 1966. The Military regimes spanned over 13 years until the new Constitution based on Executive Presidency which we are now operating comes into existence.

The New Constitution And You

THIS month, beginning from October 1, Nigeria will be operating on the Presidential System of Government, set almost on the American pattern but with Nigerian or indigenous flavour. This means that in the Second Republic which we are all witnessing, a complete break has been made from the Parliamentary system of Government which this country inherited from the British. The new constitutional structure which is about to undergo a rigorous test in democratic practice comes after thirteen years of military rule.

In the following few pages, the Radio/TV Times has endeavoured to present to its readers the political history of Nigeria and the important areas of the new Constitution, how they will be operated, and in what ways their operation will affect the life of the average citizen. Attention is therefore focused on the following:

Nigeria's Political History

Profile of the Executive President.

The Legislature.

The Executive

The Judiciary.

Objectives and Directive Principles, and Fundamental Human Rights.

It is the hope of the Radio/TV Times that by the time the reader wades through these pages, he would be in a better position to understand, appreciate and evaluate the working of the Constitution and its impact on the lives of us all.

Profile of Mr PRESIDENT

AS WE take a giant step towards a new era of constitutional twilight, there is need to have someone armed with appropriate executive powers to direct aright the ship of State. After serious examination of the qualities of who that person should be at the polls on August 11, 1979 the mantle of leadership fell on one man — now the first Nigerian Citizen; now the Executive President or shortly put, Mr. President. And who is he?

The Radio/TV Times not only brings you below his profile but also his portrait on the front cover and a diagram showing the pyramid of powers which he will wield in the interest of the nation. Full details of how these powers shall be exercised will be given under "The Executive" on later pages.

Introduced to you hereby is Mr. President — Alhaji Shehu Shagari:

*The first Executive President,
Alhaji Shehu Shagari*

SHAGARI, (Alhaji) Shehu; teacher, politician, a former cabinet minister in past civilian regime and Federal Commissioner for Finance in Gown's military government.

Born in 1924 at Yabo Sokoto, Shehu Shagari was educated in Primary School Yabo, 1931—35; Middle School Sokoto, 1935—41; Kaduna College, Kaduna, 1941—43; did his teacher training course at Zaria, 1944—45 and obtained a Higher Elementary Teacher's certificate. He was a science master at Sokoto Middle School (1945—51), headmaster Senior Primary School, Argungu (1951—52), Senior visiting teacher for Sokoto Province, (1953—56).

Alhaji Shehu entered politics as Secretary, Northern People's Congress (NPC), Sokoto (1951—56). He attended the British Council study tour of UK in 1953, and the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association conference at Westminster London in 1958.

A member of the House of Representatives (1954—66), Alhaji Shagan was appointed Parliamentary Secretary of the Prime Minister (1958—59); Acting Minister of Commerce and Industry (October—November 1959), appointed Federal Minister of Pensions and Establishments. He became the Federal Minister of Internal Affairs and Communications 1962—65; Federal Minister of Works 1965—66, the portfolio he was holding before the army took over.

With the emergence of the military government he served as secretary, Sokoto Province Education Development Fund (1967—68), Commissioner for Establishments, North-Western State (1968—69); Commissioner for Economic Development (1970—71). He was the Federal Commissioner for Finance between October, 1971 and July 1972 in succession to Chief Obafemi Awolowo who resigned.

Shehu Shagari holds the traditional title Turakin Sokoto. He is married and has six children. For hobby, Shagari plays table-tennis, farms, garden. He reads and writes Hausa poetry.

Legislative Houses And Their Functions

TO BE able to understand the functions of the various arms of government under the new dispensation, it is essential to know what the new Constitution is and the component parts of the Federal Republic of Nigeria as set out in the Constitution itself.

Under the General Provisions in Chapter 1 part 1, section 1, the Constitution is supreme and its provisions shall have binding force on authorities and persons throughout the Federal Republic of Nigeria.

On the other hand, Nigeria is one indivisible and indissoluble sovereign State consisting of 19 states and a Federal Capital Territory. These States are Anambra, Bauchi, Bendel, Benue, Borno, Cross River, Gongola, Imo, Kaduna, Kano, Kwara, Lagos, Niger, Ogun, Ondo, Oyo, Plateau, Rivers and Sokoto.

For the purposes of administering the country, there are five major areas of power concentration, as witnessed in the recent elections into the various legislative houses. The houses are the National Assembly with President as the Executive Head and the State Houses of Assembly each with its Governor. The National Assembly consists of the Senate and the House of Representatives. It is these Houses, the President and the Governor of each State that will carry out both the Legislative and the Executive functions of the Federal Republic of Nigeria. The Judicial functions will be performed by the Judiciary and its powers are vested in the courts established for country.

What, in the first instance, are the composition and the powers of the Legislature. — National or State? The National Assembly shall consist of a Senate and a House of Representatives. The Senate, on one hand, shall consist of five Senators from each State meaning in effect, 95 members in all, while the House of Representatives, on the other, shall consist of 450 members. But meanwhile, the total number of members is 449. The remaining 1 is retained for the Federal Territory see Charts. Of course, there shall be a President and Deputy President of the Senate to be elected by members of that House from among themselves. There shall also be a Speaker or Deputy Speaker of the House of Representatives to be elected by members of the House from among themselves.

On top of these two Houses is the President, who is the Chief Executive.

The House of Assembly for each State shall consist of three times the total number of seats which that State has in the House of Representatives. According to recent elections into the Houses, a total of 1,347 members were voted in and the spread allocation to each House is reflected in the table shown below. For instance, the number of seats allocated to Lagos in the House of Representatives is 12 while 36 seats are allocated to Lagos State House of Assembly. It should be noted that there shall be a Speaker and a Deputy Speaker for a House of Assembly. He shall be elected by the members of the House from among themselves.

What are the powers of these Legislative Houses and in what way would these affect the ordinary citizen of the land?

Pyramid Of Executive Power

Source: Okonjo 1975

Chart showing the pyramid of Executive power

WITHOUT a distinct and well defined arrangement in any Constitution for the separation of powers in running the affairs of any State, such a State is heading for confusion. Like the British System which Nigeria operated before the Military intervention, there was a provision for this type of arrangement. In the American system which we are about to operate from this month and on which the new Constitution is based, the separation of powers is made very clear.

This Constitutional device is aimed at checking abuse of power by any arm of the Government. The idea of separation of powers does not connote a water-tight arrangement whereby the Legislature, the Executive or the Judiciary works completely in isolation. In practice, there is that inter-relationship between them.

As could be seen in the Constitutional arrangement set-out below, the Executive powers of the President, though very precise and vast, are limited by certain provisions entrenched in the Constitution. This is to prevent the tendency towards any excesses or abuse of office. The Chart below showing the Pyramid of Executive power is illustrative of this limitation.

What are the functions and powers of this Executive symbolised in Mr. President within the context of Nigerian situation today? What also are the functions and powers of the State Executive?

To be able to comprehend this segment of our constitutional structure, an understanding of the working of the Executive as an arm of government would be essential. This is because, the part to be played by the President in running the affairs of the Country shall become noticeable.

EXECUTIVE POWERS

The Executive powers of the Federation shall be vested in the President, and may, subject to the provisions of any law made by the National Assembly, be exercised by him either directly or through the Vice-President, Ministers of the Government of the Federation or officers in the public service of the Federation. The Executive powers shall also extend to the execution and maintenance of the Constitution, all laws made by the National Assembly and to all matters with respect to which the National Assembly has for the time being power to make laws.

Subject to the provisions of the Constitution, the executive powers of a State shall be vested in the Governor of that State and may, subject to the provisions of any Law made by a House of Assembly, be exercised by him either directly or through the Deputy Governor and Commissioners of the Government of that State or officers in the public service of the State.

The Executive powers shall also extend to the execution and maintenance of the Constitution, all laws made by the House of Assembly of the State and to all matters with respect to which the House of Assembly has for the time being power to make laws. Such executive power shall, however, be so exercised as not to impede or prejudice the exercise of the executive powers of the Federation or to endanger the continuance of a Federal Government in Nigeria.

Alhaji Shehu Shagari,
the first Executive President

The President shall not declare state of war between the Federation and another country except with the sanction of a resolution of both Houses of the National Assembly sitting in joint session; and except with the prior approval of the Senate, a member of the armed forces of the Federation shall be deployed on combat duty outside Nigeria.

Role Of The Judiciary

IN ANY democracy the Judiciary plays an important role. It is possible, due to human failings, for the Legislature or the Executive to err on point of law. In consequence, the rights of the individual could be trampled upon. For instance, a citizen's property may be acquired by the Government without adequate compensation being paid to him.

Or, on the other hand, a well-placed citizen in the society may use his position to assault a less privileged citizen. Without the existence of the court of law which deals with either civil case to look into the non-payment of compensation to the aggrieved plaintiff or criminal procedure to look into appropriate punishment for the offender or accused, any hope for redress would be lost.

There are other instances where the two arms of Government could exceed limits of their powers. But with the existence of the Judiciary as a balancing factor, the State and the citizen stand to gain in many respects—in terms of law and order, stability and freedom of the individual and so on.

Under the Presidential System, the Constitution provides for the establishment of various courts in the Federation, to effect this equation.

Emblem of Justice.

Mr Justice Atanda Fatai-Williams
the newly appointed Chief Justice of the Federation.

These are:

- (a) The Supreme Court of Nigeria
- (b) The Federal Court of Appeal
- (c) The Federal High Court
- (d) A High Court of a State
- (e) A Sharia Court of Appeal of State
- (f) A Customary Court of Appeal of State
- (g) Such other courts as may be authorised by law to exercise jurisdiction on matters with respect to which the National Assembly may make laws, and
- (h) Such other courts as may be authorised by law to exercise jurisdiction at first instance or on appeal on matters with respect to which a House of Assembly may make laws.

JUDICIAL POWERS

According to the constitutional document, the judicial powers of the Federation shall be vested in the courts established for the Federation. The judicial powers of a State shall be vested in the courts established for a State.

The Courts established by the Constitution for the Federation shall be the only superior courts of record in Nigeria; and serve as otherwise prescribed by the National Assembly or by the House of Assembly of a State, each court shall have all the powers of a superior court of record.

The judicial powers shall extend, notwithstanding anything to the contrary in the Constitution, to all inherent powers and sanctions of a court of law, and to all matters, between persons, or between government or authority and any person in Nigeria, and to all actions and proceedings relating thereto, for the determination of any question as the civil rights and obligations of that person.

These powers shall not, except as otherwise provided by the Constitution, extend to any issue of question as to whether any act or omission by any authority or person or as to whether any law or any judicial decision is in conformity with the Fundamental Objectives and Directive Principles of State Policy set out in the Constitution.

Moreover, the judicial powers shall not, extending to any action or proceedings relating to any existing law made on or after 15th January, 1966 for determining any issue or question as to the competence of any authority or person make any such law.

Directive Principles

THE new Constitution, in Chapter II, spells out the Fundamental Objectives and Directive Principles of State Policy. These fundamental objectives are political, economic, social, educational, and foreign policy; while the directive principles cover Nigerian culture, obligations of the mass media, and national ethics.

It shall be the duty and responsibility of all organs of government and of all authorities and persons, exercising legislative, executive or judicial powers to conform to, observe and apply the provisions of these objectives and principles.

For the purpose of their application the Federal Republic of Nigeria shall be a State based on:

First, principles of democracy and social justice. These in effect mean that sovereignty belongs to the people of Nigeria from whom government, through the Constitution derives all its powers and authority. The security and welfare of the people shall be the primary purpose of government while the participation by the people in their government shall be ensured in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution.

Moreover, the composition of the Federal Government or any of its agencies should be such as to reflect the federal character of Nigeria and the conduct of its affairs in such a manner as to promote national unity.

Secondly, the motto of the Republic is Unity and Faith, Peace and Progress. Accordingly, national integration shall be actively encouraged, whilst discrimination on the grounds of place of origin, sex, religion, status, ethnic or linguistic association or ties is prohibited. In addition, the State shall ensure that loyalty to the nation override sectional loyalties and abolish corrupt practices and abuse of power.

Thirdly, within the context of the ideals and objectives, the State shall make provisions for the control of national economy in such a manner as to secure the maximum welfare, freedom and happiness of every citizen on the basis of social justice and equality of status and opportunity.

Furthermore, the State shall ensure the promotion of a planned and balanced economic development and the harnessing and distribution of the material resources of the community as best as possible to serve the common good. It shall not permit the concentration of wealth or the means of production or exchange in the hands of few individuals or groups. Provisions shall also be made for suitable and adequate shelter and food as well as reasonable national minimum living wage, old age care and pension and employment and sick benefit for citizens.

Fourthly, the State social order is founded on ideals of Freedom, Equality and Justice. To put this social order into effect, every citizen shall have equality of rights, obligations and opportunities before the law. Human dignity shall be maintained and enhanced, governmental actions humane, and exploitation of human and natural resources prevented. The independence, impartiality and integrity of courts of law shall be secured and maintained.

Fifthly, the Government shall direct its policy towards ensuring that there are equal and adequate educational opportunities at all levels, promoting science and technology, striving to eradicate illiteracy. To this end, the Government shall as and when practicable provide free, compulsory and universal primary education, free secondary education, free university education and free adult literacy programme.

Other objectives include foreign policy, directive on culture, obligations of the mass media and national ethics. As regards foreign policy, the State shall promote African Unity, as well as total political, economic, social and cultural liberation of Africa and other forms of international co-operation conducive to the consolidation of universal peace and mutual respect and friendship among all peoples and States. It shall also combat racial discrimination in all its ramifications.

Not only will the State project to enhance Nigerian culture, but will ensure that the Press, radio, television and other agencies of the mass media shall at all times be free to uphold fundamental objectives and uphold responsibility and accountability of Government to the people. The National ethic shall be based on Discipline, Self-reliance and Patriotism.

A cross-section of Nigerian community showing the different culture but emphasising unity.

Rights Of The Citizen

UNDER the Constitution the fundamental rights of every citizen are guaranteed. These are rights to life, dignity of human person, personal liberty, fair hearing by a court, private and family life, freedom of thought, conscience and religion, freedom of expression and the press, peaceful assembly and association.

Every person has a right to life, under the Constitution, and no one shall be deprived intentionally of his life except in execution of the sentence of a court in respect of a criminal offence of which he has been found guilty in Nigeria. On the other hand, every individual is entitled to respect for the dignity of his person and accordingly no person shall be subject to torture, inhuman or degrading treatment, slavery, servitude or be required to perform compulsory labour.

One's personal liberty is also guaranteed. Every person shall be entitled to his personal liberty and no one shall be deprived of such liberty except in some special cases and in accordance with a procedure permitted by law. For example, sentence or order of a court in respect of a criminal offence of which he has been found guilty or in case of a person who has not attained the age 18 years, for the purpose of his education or welfare.

The Constitution also provides for the right of the individual to fair hearing. In the determination of his rights and obligation including any question or determination by or against any government or authority, a person shall be entitled to a fair hearing within a reasonable time by a court or other tribunal established by law. Such a court or tribunal shall be constituted in a manner as to secure its independence and impartiality.

Moreover, the privacy of citizens, their homes, correspondence, telephone communications, is guaranteed. Every person shall, in addition, be entitled to freedom of thought, conscience and religion. This includes freedom to change his religion, and belief and freedom (either alone or in community with others, and in public or in private) to manifest and propagate his religion or belief in worship, teaching, practice and observance.

No person attending any place of education shall be required to receive religious instruction or take part in or attend any religious ceremony or observance if such instruction, ceremony or observance relates to a religion other than his own or a religion not approved by his parent or guardian. But no religious community or denomination shall be prevented from providing religious instruction for pupils of that community or denomination in any place of education maintained wholly by that community or denomination.

Furthermore, the Constitution makes provision for freedom of expression and the press. Every person shall be entitled to hold opinions and to receive and impart ideas and information without interference. Every person shall also be entitled to own, establish and operate any medium for the dissemination of information, ideas and opinions. No person, however, shall own, establish or operate a television or wireless broadcasting station for any purpose whatsoever except the Government of the Federation or of a State or any other person or body authorised by the President.

Other provisions stipulate that every person shall be entitled to assemble freely and associate with other persons. In particular, he may form or belong to any political party, trade union or any other association for the protection of his interests, but must observe certain provisions of the Constitution.

The rights of the individual as regards freedom of movement, freedom from discrimination, compulsory acquisition of property, restriction on and derogation from fundamental rights and special jurisdiction of High Court and legal aid are all provided for in the Constitution.

Envoys On Nation-wide Tour

By Usman Shehu

BEFORE undertaking a nation-wide tour of the States in the Federation, the Ambassadors and High Commissioners attended a Seminar in Lagos. The purpose of this and their going round the country was to acquaint them with the latest developments in the nation and on foreign policy matters.

The recalling of Nigerian diplomats for consultations and briefing is nothing new. In particular, the military regime made good use of the system because the civil war had shown that there was a necessity to overhaul the country's external publicity. The desire to provide an opportunity for all the Ambassadors to be involved in the process of decision-making on how to project the nation properly as well as keeping abreast of developments at home, has encouraged their being recalled periodically in the past few years.

No doubt, those who represent the country abroad should themselves have a good knowledge of the nation. That enables them to be in a position to brief and talk authoritatively with foreign visitors and investors who meet them in their stations wanting to know about Nigeria.

This is why the country-wide tour undertaken by the envoys is important. They have seen the various development projects going on in different parts of the federation and can appreciate the progress made and learn about attendant problems. The personal knowledge acquired in this way is invaluable.

It was timely that the Ambassadors and High Commissioners were brought home to be briefed at the period when the elections were in progress. This has put them in a position to know how the elections were conducted and be able to counter any false impression which might be created abroad.

Map of Nigeria showing 19 States

In fact on returning to their stations, one would expect the envoys to find ways and means of educating the people in those countries not only about the economic policies and opportunities in Nigeria, but also on the political situation in the country.

The peaceful atmosphere under which the elections were held, the general acceptability of the results and the stability that prevails should be publicised. This is necessary because foreigners normally feel hedgy about transition from military to civil rule in developing countries.

The Ambassadors have seen things for themselves and there is no cause for apprehension as far as Nigeria is concerned. The mood throughout the Federation is that this country has had enough crisis and Nigerians want a peaceful future.

The Ambassadors should also further enlighten the people in the countries where they are serving about the Federal Government's foreign policy. Foreigners should be made to realise that the take-over of British Petroleum Company in Nigeria was not a punitive action. It should be explained to them that it was taken because of the violation of our policy that prohibits those doing business in this country from trading or investing in South Africa.

Such education is necessary to forestall the mischievous interpretation which detractors would give to our actions. At the same time people in other countries must be made to appreciate that Nigeria, as a nation, is now more than ever committed to the liberation of African territories. As a result a change from military to civilian administration will not deter the progressive policy that the Federal Government has been pursuing.

One hopes that the visit of the envoys home will remind them of the duty to look after the people of the country in the States where they are serving. This aspect of their function cannot be over-stressed. It is the belief that this laudable programme of interaction between the home government and our ambassadors will be maintained in order to keep our envoys abreast of national affairs and make them continue to play more active roles in evolving and executing our foreign policy.

BP Company Sent Packing

— Move to Curb Apartheid Policy

THE action of the Federal Government against the British Petroleum Company in Nigeria is not a punitive one as some sections of the Western Press have interpreted it because compensation is to be paid and the measure followed the violation of an order.

All foreign companies operating in this country have, since the 1977 Lagos World Conference on Actions Against Apartheid, been warned against doing business with South Africa. Those that already had commercial interest in the racist territory were later asked to make a declaration and give an undertaking to end such connections as a condition for being allowed to continue to operate in Nigeria.

Since then, the axe had fallen on some foreign enterprises. By February last year, some expatriate companies had forfeited Federal Government patronage for hiding their South African connections. Further warning was then given that companies caught would be fined five times as much as the value of any contract awarded to them in this country.

When the President of Barclays Bank International boasted that his establishment would continue to invest and expand in South Africa, the Federal Government reacted. Government departments were asked to close their accounts with the Barclays Bank in Nigeria, in what was obviously a first step.

There was spontaneous response, not only from the public but also from the private sector in compliance with the government's directive. Faced with mass withdrawals of accounts, the Bank dissociated itself from the stand of its international parent body based in London and changed its identity in Nigeria under the new name of Union Bank to demonstrate its independence.

The Conservative Government in Britain cannot claim ignorance of the long-standing policy of Nigeria on companies doing business with South Africa. But in a scheme that was entirely deceitful, Mrs. Thatcher's government in granting permission for the sale of British oil to South Africa in the middle of last month, tried to be clever by half. The British Petroleum Company was not asked to deal directly with the racists. It was to sell petroleum to member nations of the European Economic Community, but letting them know that they were free to sell to any country of their choice including South Africa.

In dealing with the apartheid regime through a third-party, the British Petroleum was all the same negating international efforts to eliminate the obnoxious policy of apartheid.

The denial of Mrs. Thatcher's Government in the wake of Nigeria's action against British Petroleum that it did not order the sale of oil to South Africa is ridiculous in the face of unchallengeable facts. After all, the Western Press published the news of British sale of oil to South Africa.

Mrs. Thatcher's devoted support for the apartheid regime and Muzorewa's puppet administration are very well-known. In the face of this indiscrete policy of siding with the racists, every action is needed to combat Mrs. Thatcher's campaign to gain international support for the apartheid regime and Muzorewa's administration.

In this period of energy crisis that has necessitated oil rationing and an increase in price in many countries, Britain is bound to feel the pinch of the stoppage of the 10% petroleum that Nigeria supplies to her. It will not be easy for her to find a quick replacement or make up for it immediately from her North-Sea Oil. The action against the British Petroleum Company should serve as a warning to Mrs. Thatcher and her Conservative Government on her policy on Eastern Africa.

It is relevant to re-state Nigeria's assurance to all foreign companies operating in this country that they have nothing to fear as long as they respect the policies of this nation, especially Nigeria's uncompromising stand on the Southern African issue.

Mrs. Margaret Thatcher, British Prime Minister.

TALKS ON TECHNOLOGY

DR. BASSEY W. Andah, acting Head of the Department of Archaeology, University of Ibadan, has been chosen to write this year's 'October Lectures' for FRCN, Lagos. The programme is usually the product of the writer's research work. The subject of the lecture, this year, is: 'Nigeria's Indigenous Technology'.

In the series, which will consist of six lectures, Dr. Andah will examine the technology used by our forefathers for building, agriculture, transportation and for the manufacture of house-hold goods. The lectures will also speculate on what the future of our indigenous technology would have been if western technology had not been imposed on us through the process of colonialism.

Dr. Andah was educated at the University of Ibadan where he obtained a B.A. (Hons.) degree in History with specialization in African History and Ethnography. He later went to London University where he got his master's degree in Archaeology in 1967. In 1973, at the University of California in the United States, Dr. Andah obtained his PH.D. in Anthropology. He has also lectured in universities in the United States and Ghana.

Dr. Bassey Andah is the author of many articles and publications on History, Archaeology and Anthropology.

The broadcast of the lectures will begin in the first week of this month. The Radio/TV Times will begin to publish the series of lectures from the next issue.

Problem Of Brain Drain

By: Atlade Atoyebi

THE Federal and State Public Service Commissions are responsible for the recruitment of staff for the civil service in the country. Over the years, members of the Commissions have gone on recruitment tours abroad.

Usually, these public service commissioners go after two categories of people. They try to attract foreign experts to come and work in the vital areas where our people are yet to find their feet. From experience, no country wants to part with its best hands. This means that a few of those foreign experts who present themselves to the interview panel actually accept offers of appointment.

Then, the Commissioners usually place greater emphasis on getting Nigerians who are highly qualified in their field of studies. Again, it is known that there is a discouraging disparity between those who turn up for interviews and those who eventually return home.

The problem is even compounded by some who had assumed duty at home and suddenly decide to return to the country from where they were recruited. The result is that today, there are hundreds of Nigerian doctors, engineers, accountants and seasoned administrators working in Europe and the United States. This should not have been the case especially when it is realized that one of the most glaring constraints in the successful implementation of our national development plan is lack of skilled middle and high-level manpower.

Statutory bodies like the public service commissions in the Federation have been addressing their minds to this problem of brain drain from Nigeria. As far back as May 1973, the Federal Government had set up an inter-ministerial committee to look into the situation and make appropriate recommendations. Members of the Committee included people from the public and private sectors as well as the universities.

The report of the committee published in November 1974 is quite revealing. It is known, for example, that one of the reasons why qualified Nigerians continue to stay abroad is that they prefer the higher remuneration and better conditions of service prevalent in the developed countries. These people fail to appreciate the fact that we can only pay what our own economy can sustain. A few of them had returned home to discover that they have no apartment to move into as part of their conditions of service. Some of them had courageously fought and lost the battle to secure accommodation on their own either because the houses were not available or the rents were too exorbitant.

Yet, there are those qualified Nigerians who still want to come back home in spite of all odds but do not have the relevant information about job opportunities in Nigeria. A few Nigerians who had come to stay have alleged that the public service commission which was instrumental to their taking up appointments in the country, usually failed to meet its own side of the bargain.

There is no doubt that these and many other problems have been engaging the attention of the various arms of government. These days, recruitment attaches function in our embassies abroad to help willing Nigerians process their applications for employment. Many employers of labour too have been making efforts to ease the initial problems which are facing qualified Nigerians returning home.

In the final analysis, this country is committed to massive development in all the sectors of its economy. And so, our public service commissions and other staff recruitment agencies cannot afford to relent in their efforts to encourage qualified Nigerians to come and serve their country.

Schools' Challenge Finals

—Closing Session's Speech

SCHOOLS' CHALLENGE, which was born nine years ago and which has since been the nurtured child of the broadcasting authorities performed its National Finals for this year on July 6, 1979 at Port Harcourt, Rivers State. At the closing session was the Zonal Director, FRCN Lagos, Mr. Sunday Young-Harry who made an impressive speech during the ceremony on behalf of Director-General FRCN.

Below is the text of his speech.

HONOURABLE Commissioner, Distinguished Guests, Ladies and Gentlemen. On behalf of the Federal Radio Corporation of Nigeria, I would like to express my profound gratitude to the Honourable Commissioner for finding time in his no doubt crowded official programme to be present here to watch the last session of this year's final contest in the nation-wide Schools Challenge Quiz Competition. Your presence here, Mr. Commissioner, is an eloquent testimony of the great interest our leaders take in the intellectual and physical development of the youth of this nation. My Director-General would have been personally present here but for other pressing national business. I convey his compliments and respects.

Schools Challenge, the brain child of the broadcasting authorities was born literally in 1970 soon after our national crisis. It had a very humble beginning with only four schools from Lagos and the then Western Region participating, but by 1973 all the (12) States in the Federation were actively involved.

The organisation has always been on a two-tier system — the state contests in which schools in a state meet each other on a knock-out basis, and the National series in which the state champions compete among themselves. This meeting here today has been one of such occasions.

Mr. Sunday Young — Harry

The Federal Radio Corporation of Nigeria and its predecessor the NBC have organised these competitions at considerable expense and effort. But these are not important considerations. We believe that by bringing together students from their various towns and states from all over the country we are creating a healthy atmosphere for competition and providing them the opportunity for social inter action — to know each other, to know other parts of the country, their people, their cultures at first hand.

We acknowledge the fact that the youth, the young citizens of today are bound to play an important role in the affairs of this country long after the present generation of leaders have left the stage. The future of this nation belongs to the youth of today much in the same way as our leaders of today inherited their present role from our forebears.

It is our expectation that the students who have participated in the entire series, both at the state and national levels, would have seen in practical terms the advantages of sportsmanship, alertness of mind, friendliness and competition without bitterness or rancour. These are all ingredients of a well-developed individual.

For Schools Challenge pure academics are not the aim, they are only peripheral. The essence is teamwork. It is the school or state which wins or loses though we acknowledge individual excellence.

Indeed in 1974 we formalized our motto for these contests as "Unity and Friendship Through Knowledge". We are pleased that this year here in the Rivers State capital, Port-Harcourt, eighteen states have taken part in this somewhat brain-storming contests. The State Government through the agency of Radio Rivers have been excellent hosts and F.R.C.N. takes this opportunity to thank the authorities and particularly the General Manager Radio Rivers for placing their facilities at our disposal.

Finally, Honourable Commissioner the trophy to be presented this year is a brand new one which bears the Corporation's emblem and our initials FRCN. It is our hope that the winner today will be worthy of it and like donors seek new horizons to contribute in the service of our dear country uplift the people and unite the nation.

MYOPIA—On Threshold Of Solution

By: Pro. EDWARD AVETISOV

THE problem of near-sightedness affects vast numbers of people, particularly among the youth. Some 24% of the students of the universities of Zurich are myopic, and so are 33% of Senior school pupils in China, 20% of graduates in the United States.

In Japan, 40% of the population wear glasses, in Sweden, more than 30% do. In the Soviet Union the index is 20%. In six per cent of the cases myopia leads to complications and disability. The figure seems small, but it represents millions of people and regrettably, their number keeps growing.

Since myopia was made an object of intensive research, many theories were advanced as to its source. Eventually, it was declared an incurable hereditary disease. This hypothesis gained such wide acceptance that in most countries ophthalmologists abandoned any attempts to combat myopia on an organized basis, and made a mistake.

However today, morphologists, geneticists, hygienists, biophysicists, biochemists, anthropologists and opticians have joined in the research. All hypotheses pertaining to the origin of the disease have been painstakingly reviewed. The eye-sights of more than 200,000 school children have been checked. Almost 5,000 myopes have been examined and a series of experiments conducted. To date, on generalizing all available data, scientists report that certain factors are in the main, responsible for near-sightedness.

One is hereditary predisposition. It has been discovered that in families in which myopia has been recurring for several generations, it is found three times as frequently as the norm.

A second factor is subnormal accommodation. It may result from a low blood supply to the eye due to many diseases like chronic tonsillitis or rheumatism. In such cases, prolonged eye work at a short distance, especially in adverse conditions, puts too great a strain on the eye.

The above concept of the origin of myopia has been gaining increasing support. New scientific data on the development of the disease for the first time led to the idea of preventing myopia and its progress by medical and eye exercises.

A special system of training has been developed. Compared to long-established treatment methods this system reduces myopia's rate of progression to 20%. Surgical treatment also holds great promise. In all cases of complicated myopia, doctors can perform an operation designed to strengthen the rear section of the eye. Such surgery creates a mechanical frame for the eyeball, in a sense, preventing it from further stretching. Years of observation reveal that progressive myopia is usually halted after such an operation.

But the greatest hopes are pinned on the continued study of the sclera. It is vital to discover which of its metabolic processes is responsible for the changes resulting in progressive myopia. Hence a bridge towards practice — a search for more potent medicaments.

Church Music Goes Commercial

—by Phil Maba.

LOOKING back 25 years ago one wonders at the incredible speed with which musical transformation appears to have taken place.

For instance, we can still recall such memorable pop stars as Helen Shapiro ("Walking Back to Happiness"), Cliff Richards going on a "Summer Holiday", Mike Samuels inviting some unlovely lady to "Come outside", Frank Field brooding through a touch of "Lovers' Blues" and Frankie Vaughan showing off his "Tower of Strength".

It's all fascinating even to expect that pop music after six years can regress the way it has. But there it is, a lot in the way of new musical dimensions seems to have happened ever since pop lost its usual grip on the young world.

One of such dimensions is church music which suddenly turns into some lucrative commercial enterprises. In fact, many churches now keep choirs with the strong inclination towards waxing records out of church songs.

It may be necessary also to add that the fact that the idea of integrating orchestral music into the normal conduct of church services seems widely accepted, is another factor which has helped to promote national interest in recorded church music. Besides, the recording usually enjoys equal professionalism in orchestral arrangement and voice dubbing as pop records do.

Choir of Christ Apostolic Church, Yaba.

Sometimes, the final product is more acceptable than the local juju piece.

Among the few churches which started this fascinating idea is the Christ Apostolic Church Choir, Yaba, led by organist S.A. Adeosun. The composition of its orchestration isn't anything far from the usual set-up of local orchestras — trumpet, drums of various sorts (including the semba and talking drum), sekere and organ — and this in effect makes the music sound equally swinging and enticing as that of the average juju music. In fact, in most cases, the listener hardly realises that it is a church record spinning, not until the lyrics start filtering in, carrying along with them moving evangelical messages.

The Christ Apostolic Church Choir Yaba, has, no doubt, from all that succeeded in giving the impression of a body playing the dual role of entertaining and spreading christianity to the common man. Of a partial appeal, incidentally, is its peculiar way of chorusing — notably its perfect in word-articulation.

In the few albums it has waxed would appear that this essential quality is made distinct in a way. This is because the usual studio noises found characteristic of communal singing here reduced to almost barest minimum. Hence, the listener finds it easy to follow the underlying message which usually revolve round Christ the Saviour of Humanity.

It is perhaps pertinent to point out another essential fact. The clearly noticeable difference between this particular choir and any juju group, despite the almost common beat-form or rhythm which their music share virtually lies in the fact that the form hardly supplicate generally as the latter. Instead it merely tries to transmit the teachings of Christ, as it were through music. Of course the songs are mainly meant to help arrest the mind and thereafter direct it toward prayer and spiritual awakening. They are designed for pleasure dancing such, although sometimes the compelling rhythmic beat of the drums and sometimes swinging style of the changing melody make it almost impossible for the mind to refrain from drifting away, occasionally.

S. A. Adeosun, Organist/Leader.

1000 Great Years

REVIEWER: GABRIEL EGBE

Abdel Nasser

THE 1000 Great Events is a sister publication of 100 Great Lives, in that most of the achievements of the personalities in "1000 Great Lives" were repeated in form of historic events in "1000 Great Events". As the title of the book indicates, "1000 Great Events" gives a brief account of one thousand of the greatest events that have occurred in the history of mankind.

Some of them are great advances in the history of man — great medical or scientific discoveries for example. Others are births and death of great men and women who have shaped history. Although most events in the book are of great importance, some were destructive, and caused the loss of thousands of lives like the Thirty Years War or the dropping of the atomic bomb on Hiroshima. "1000 Great Events" also covers seven thousand years of the world's history.

This might seem a long time, but it is quite brief compared with the four million years or so that man has walked the earth. Yet, man himself is a real newcomer to earth, although he has had more impact on his surroundings than any other creature. There are certain events listed in the books which cannot be regarded as of historical importance. But events such as the first crossing of the Atlantic, Alexander the Great's conquests of most of early Middle East, the building of the Egyptian Pyramids, and Man's first landing on the moon, are all great events, that have made history to mankind, and were really significant.

But to say Raphael, an Italian painter, Balzac, Le Pere Goriot, French novelists, or Richard Wagner, German poet, are among the great events, is unacceptable. These men could have found a better place in the book "1000 Great Lives", since their achievements were based on creativity, not discovery or war.

Authors of famous books on the achievements of both white and black, have always been biased against blacks. In "1000 Great Lives" the author mentions only Kwame Nkrumah and Abel Gamal Nasser as black great lives. This is far from the truth. Here again in "1000 Great Events," the authors left out great black events like the Benin Massacre, Bayajda's slaying of the giant snake, Ibin Batuta's crossing of the Sahara Desert, the Zulu War, and many other great events. However the authors remember to mention the Nigerian Civil War as one of the great events.

Africans themselves can create great events by using their black power for the benefit of mankind. By so doing, the world would be a better place to live in.

OUR RATE CARD

For Your Effective Advertising

AFTER years of quiet circulation during which a systematic study was undertaken to ascertain readers' tastes and advertisers' requirements, we are proud to present today a magazine which, we hope, has successfully translated into form your highly esteemed ideas and suggestions.

The current editions of RADIO/TV TIMES reveal a history of steady progress and improvement in quality, standard and scope. In fact there is every ground now for one to say 'Oh Yes! The RADIO/TV TIMES has made it'! We are not stopping at that either.

We have more reasons than many a publisher to cry over "INFLATION" and rising production costs. But where "Satisfaction First" (for readers and advertisers) is the over-riding principle, profit occupies only the next place in our policy.

This explains why, in spite of the extremely keen competition in the field of commercial advertising, RADIO/TV TIMES can still afford to accept advertisement at a rate below one kobo to reach one thousand readers. What is more, when you consider the aggregate positive effect of an advertisement in RADIO/TV TIMES, supplementing your combinations on radio and television, the resultant massive impact is quite obvious.

The advertisement rates tabulated below took effect from 1st of April, 1977. We look forward to your substantial patronage as soon as possible, while assuring you of prompt satisfaction always.

i. THE JOURNAL: The "Radio/TV Times" is the monthly programme journal covering all the radio and television stations, published by the Federal Radio Corporation. The journal is now 25 years old on the market. As a supplementary guide to programmes' schedule, the readership of this journal is understandably tilted up with the radio and television audience - a well balanced cross-section of the society, representative of all ages, sexes; income brackets, intellectual levels and tastes. That the current size of this audience has grown into millions is now common knowledge.

Apart from highlighting Radio/TV programmes, the journal seeks to generate public interest in healthy social events, as well as local, national and international issues, with emphasis on Africa. But while taking in its strides the wide range of programmes offered by the radio and television, "Radio/TV Times" is breaking new grounds of its own to embrace a wider range of interests in order to provide greater satisfaction for its ever expanding readership.

Public demand for the "Radio/TV Times" in recent times has been so extensive that the possibility of stepping up the current circulation in stages to keep pace ultimately with the radio and television audience is being actively explored.
