Cry Freedom

Repression and resistance: How new generation challenges African autocrats and international allies

It's your man who did this!' shouts a woman at a village meeting in Nakuru County, Kenya. She is filmed by Kenyan journalists as she points at another woman, a supporter of a powerful local politician known for associating with gangsters. In the run-up to the Kenyan elections of August 2022, five women in this area were raped and murdered and their bodies set alight. According to the Kenyan documentary Ganglands, for which this meeting was filmed, the villagers suspect an intimidation campaign by criminals to 'force the public to either vote for specific candidates or not to leave their home altogether', as a former gang member interviewed in the documentary puts it.

Violent intimidation during elections has been rife for years in Kenya, where political office means joining a ruling elite with access to significant wealth and power and ambitious politicians need to get their votes in one way or another. In 2022, however, the scare tactics seem to have been less successful than before. Though a staunch establishment figure still won the presidency, a record number of independent candidates were also elected; among them was a newcomer from Nakuru County, who was elected despite the gangsters' tactics by voters who decided they'd had enough.

Rising protest

Resistance against autocratic leaders and the parties they head, as well as a rejection of the oppression of political opposition, is growing not just in Kenya. A new investigation covering Kenya, Uganda, Cameroon, Nigeria and Zimbabwe found that in each of these countries an overwhelmingly young population who are urbanised, aware and social media savvy, are staking a claim to their futures. They're vocally fed up with the lack of development and freedom, as well as the patronage systems that only benefit a political elite. They are also increasingly demanding that their leaders' foreign development partners look more critically at who and what they're actually supporting.

In Cameroon, for example, where a small clique centred around 89-year-old dictator Paul Biya's clan has diverted hundreds of millions of dollars of COVID-19 relief funds into cronies' pockets, civil society has formally requested the International Monetary Fund not to grant new loans until previous cash is accounted for. Such international solidarity, they say, is needed because demands for accountability within the country itself are usually met with harsh action by the security forces and the state itself. Not only are outspoken opponents and critics subject to mass arrests, abductions and torture, but even state officials who try to flag corruption and protect health budgets find themselves blocked or punished.

The doctors were transferred for 'sticking their nose where it doesn't belong'

ZAM's Cameroon team spoke to two doctors working in the state health department who both described being removed from audits and transferred away as revenge for 'sticking their nose where it doesn't belong'. One of the doctors, Albert Ze, experienced multiple threats and break-ins before finally being transferred to a remote office in a conflict zone where armed separatist rebels are known to attack civil servants of the central state. Despite being forced to live apart from his wife and children for their safety, 'Dr Ze' continues to use his Twitter account to demand accountability from Cameroon's leaders. This is more than can be said for the IMF, which turned a deaf ear to protestors and granted Cameroon another loan.

A transnational investigation by Ngina Kirori, Emmanuel Mutaizibwa, Chief Bisong Etahoben, Elizabeth Banyitabi, Theophilus Abbah and Brezh Malaba

The thugs were 'acting on instruction'

Similar demands come from Nigeria, where anti-corruption activist Olarenwu Suraj and his wife were both badly beaten during a targeted attack on their home. The attackers told their victims that they were 'acting on instruction', a sign of political motivation. Suraj later told reporter Theophilus Abbah that 'the international community should do more in terms of ex-communicating those with poor human rights records from the comity of nations.'

Zimbabwe, meanwhile, has recorded close to two thousand cases of intimidation and assault by groups of governing party supporters countrywide in 2022 alone. There, opposition and civil society also continue to appeal to the international community for support, while the state continues to try to choke off all funding and support to their organisations and activities. 'I have spoken to other journalists, young ones, who are afraid of touching corruption stories because you can get harassed, or your camera can be taken away. It would be good if someone could say, 'No, this is wrong, we're going to give them another camera. [...] Just to step in whenever they lose something or their constitutional rights are not respected,' says journalist Hopewell Chin'ono to ZAM's reporter Brezh Malaba.

Cybercrimes

The arsenal of oppressive laws used to jail outspoken critics in Zimbabwe now includes everything from 'public incitement' and 'disturbing the peace' to 'communicating false statements', 'undermining or insulting the President' and a 'cyber crimes' bill that allows digital surveillance of, and possible charges against, internet users. Such 'cybercrime' laws have proliferated in all five investigated countries in the past decade, possibly as a response to an increasingly online population which finds its information, its voice and its community on the internet.

This development has made the internet a whole new terrain of struggle. Nigeria and Uganda joined other African countries including Mozambique and Senegal in shutting down the internet completely to snuff out protests. All five countries in this investigation also acquired digital surveillance technology that enables the monitoring of smartphones and laptops. In all cases the snooping software was purchased from Israeli companies. In Nigeria, journalists now even face possible 'cyberstalking' charges if they carry out background research on powerful politicians and their business associates via the internet.

'Stop paying our oppressors' is the battle cry

Frustrated by their states' willingness to ignore or punish protest domestically, civil society activists in all five of the countries in the investigation have found themselves increasingly directing their appeals towards international bodies like the IMF, the United Nations and development partners. 'Stop paying our oppressor', is the battle cry of Ugandan opposition leader and Afrobeat musician Bobi Wine. An audience of hundreds recently attended the screening of a documentary about his life at the Carré Theatre in Amsterdam, cheering his protest songs about politics and the plight of the 'ghetto'.

'Stop giving money' may be rather too simple as a slogan, however, since there is good reason to fear that the few services available to the Ugandan public would be the first to disappear if donors pulled out; the same goes for the other countries in this investigation. Nevertheless, civil society activists in all five countries have all sincerely asked western development partners to take a long hard look at what their money is really doing. Echoing similar demands made in Cameroon, five Ugandan opposition leaders recently asked for aid to the country to be suspended 'in all but the most basic humanitarian sectors.'

Lucrative contracts

In Kenya, many in civil society worry that the Western appetite for lucrative infrastructure and mineral contracts may result in a hesitancy for donor nations to fund organisations that agitate for democracy, good governance and an end to human rights abuses. 'Priorities seem to have changed, says the leader of one civil society organisation, who asked to remain anonymous. 'Several reports we compiled on misuse of public funds have been met with silence, very little action and reduced funding.' Asked why he thinks this is so, he replies that Western partner countries 'are more concerned about doing business with the Kenyan government' nowadays, especially 'with regard to contracts that might otherwise go to China and the East.'

Certain NGOs have been flagged as 'terrorists'

Donor support for grassroots organisations is furthermore in danger because of a crop of new money-laundering laws recently being passed across the continent, including in the five countries covered by this investigation. These laws are designed to stem the flow of funds that might in the past have found their way to terrorist organisations, which is why the G-20's Financial Action Task Force (FATF) backed them. But several African governments have discovered that these same laws are remarkably well-suited for blocking foreign financial support from reaching local NGOs. In 2021 in Uganda, for example, lawyer and human rights defender Nicholas Opiyo found himself arrested along with four of his colleagues after his legal charity, Chapter Four, received money from an external source.

We spent $1bn to retrieve territories – Buhari

By Muideen Olaniyi

President Muhammadu Buhari yesterday said Nigeria retrieved the swathes of territories from terrorists by investing over $1 billion (N445bn official rate or N740 billion in the black market) to procure hard and software weaponry from the United States and other friendly countries to carry out sustained operations against insurgency since 2015.

He said this while speaking at the African Conference for Peace, 2023, in Nouakchott, Islamic Republic of Mauritania.

Buhari, who was honoured by the Abu Dhabi Peace Forum with the 'Award for Strengthening Peace in Africa', said there was a need to inculcate values and principles of tolerance and peace in educational institutions, particularly among the youth.

Our correspondent reports that at the start of 2015, Boko Haram controlled about 20 local government areas in Borno, Adamawa and Yobe states, forcing the then administration of Goodluck Jonathan to postpone the general elections by weeks, and when they were held, then presidential candidate Muhammadu Buhari won.

While the Jonathan administration recovered some of the LGAs, the new administration of Buhari, which was sworn-in on May 29, 2015, continued the fight against Boko Haram, which took arms against the Nigerian State in 2009.

A 2021 report of the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) said the insurgency-related conflicts claimed the lives of almost 350,000 people in the northeastern part of the country up till the end 2020.

The report said insurgency directly resulted in the death of 35,000 people in three states in the region, while an estimated 314,000 people died "from indirect causes" in the entire North East region.

"The report estimates that through the end of 2020, the conflict in the North East will have resulted in nearly 350,000 deaths, with 314,000 of those from indirect causes," the UNDP Resident Representative, Mohamed Yahya, said in a statement.

The statement gave the major highlights in the report entitled, 'Assessing the Impact of Conflict on Development in North East Nigeria'.

According to Mr Yahya, the findings in the report showed that "For each casualty caused directly by insurgency, an additional nine people, primarily children, have lost their lives due to a lack of food and resources - and more than 90 per cent of conflict-attributable deaths are of children under the age of five."

'How to get enduring peace'

President Buhari in Mauritania urged leaders to place premium on youth development, with more seriousness and actionable ideas in promoting skill acquisitions, while discouraging idleness.

The president said idleness of youths and non-inclusion in discussing issues that shape their lives and the future portend liability for the continent, especially in religious fundamentalism and extremism.

Buhari, in a statement issued by his spokesman, Femi Adesina, said efforts must be concretised towards the curtailment and possible prevention of the circulation of small arms and light weapons, as well as the festering of foreign fighters in the African continent.

The president called for the imperatives of the next Summit of the African Union to take a holistic review of the challenges that continue to linger in Libya with the hope of finding pragmatic African approach to resolving the over a decade-old instability that made that country a safe-haven for all kinds of weapons and foreign fighters whose profound impacts stare all in the sub-regions and Africa.

"For us in Nigeria, we continue to engage bilaterally and multilaterally to comprehensively win the war against the Boko Haram insurgency and other related terror groups through kinetic and non-kinetic approaches.

"When I assumed power in 2015, Boko Haram held about two-thirds of Borno State, half of Yobe State, and a couple of local government areas in Adamawa State, all in the North East of Nigeria.

"We have been able to retrieve these swathes of territories by investing over a $1 billion dollars to acquire hard and software weaponry from the US and other friendly countries to carry out sustained operations against insurgency since 2015.

"Our armed forces and those of our partners in the Multinational Joint Task Force (consisting of Chad, Niger, Cameroon, Benin Republic and Nigeria), continue to demonstrate great bravery while paying the ultimate price in securing our collective freedom."

Buhari thanked the Abu Dhabi Forum for Peace under the tutelage and sterling leadership of Shaykh Abdallah Bin Bayyah, for the honour of nominating him as the recipient of the "African Award for Strengthening the Peace".

In his remarks, the President of the Forum for Promoting Peace in Muslim Societies, Shaykh Bin Bayyah, said the 2023 conference theme was based on the recommendations of the "Nouakchott Declaration" which aims to deconstruct the religious basis of extremist speeches and to limit violence based on religious arguments enshrined as a reference document in the African Vision for Peace at the 33rd Summit of Heads of State of the African Union.

Welcoming African leaders and scholars to the peace conference, the president of Mauritania, Mohamed Ould Ghazouani, said the award was given to President Buhari for providing good leadership and promoting peace in a multi-ethnic, multicultural and multi-linguistic country like Nigeria, and extending his experience and wisdom to other African countries.

Meanwhile, Buhari also yesterday said "Boko Haram is false" and their financiers only want to split the country with their support to the terrorist group.

He stated this when he met with the President of the Abu Dhabi Peace Forum, Shaykh Abdullah Bin Bayyah, at the sidelines of the African Conference for Peace, in Nouakchott, Mauritania.

FG advises workers against sedentary lifestyles, launches fitness centre

By Abbas Jimoh

The Federal Government has advised civil servants against sedentary lifestyles capable of making them to suffer mental and physical illness.

The Head of the Civil Service of the Federation, Folasade Yemi-Esan, gave the advice Tuesday in Abuja at the commissioning of a newly established employee wellness centre for all categories of workers.

According to her, civil servants should make the best use of the services being offered by the centre, which guarantee a healthy and productive workforce.

"I urged you (civil servants) to eschew sedentary lifestyles which, contribute greatly to sudden deaths occasioned by ailments caused, majorly, by stress.

A healthy body translates into significant reduction in medical conditions, thereby enhancing the output of workers, in particular, and the attainment of national developmental goals, in general," she said.

She said seminars on topical health issues, mental health counselling and the promotion of regular health screening for early detection of medical conditions are some of the services the centre would provide.

She noted that the world is witnessing an unprecedented rise in work-related diseases, sudden deaths and other health challenges that impact negatively on the overall wellbeing of workers as well as their productivity.

According to her, the International Labour Organisation (ILO) estimates that about 2.3m workers around the world succumb to work-related accidents or diseases, every year.

She also said that President Muhammadu Buhari's administration had taken proactive measures to enhance the value proposition and welfare of civil servants as articulated in the Federal Civil Service Strategy and Implementation Plan 2021-2025 (FCSSIP 25).

Buhari salutes ex-Commonwealth Secretary-General, Anyaoku, at 90

President Muhammadu Buhari has rejoiced with a former Secretary-General of the Commonwealth, Chief Emeka Anyaoku, on his 90th birthday.

The president, in a letter he personally signed and released yesterday by his spokesman, Femi Adesina, saluted Anyaoku's contributions to Nigeria's development.

He expressed gratitude to the "respected diplomat who used his network of international friends to support the country's efforts in deepening good governance, democracy and sustainable development."

The letter read: "It gives me great joy and delight to warmly rejoice with a seasoned diplomat and administrator, Chief Emeka Anyaoku, on his 90th birthday, January 18, 2023.

"I acknowledge the worthy contributions you have made to the development of the country, starting out as a young Foreign Service Officer, and reaching the pinnacle of your career as Secretary-General of the Commonwealth, through vision and diligence, and consistently projecting Nigeria as a great nation.

"Thank you for your statesmanship, and for using your extensive network of international friends to support the country's efforts in deepening good governance, democracy and sustainable development.

"As you hit the milestone of 90, we give glory to God for the grace of longevity, in good health and sound mind, and rejoice with you, your family and loved ones. "Happy birthday."

UN, ECOWAS warn Nigeria against election violence

From Ado A. Musa (Jos),
Abbas Jimoh & Balarabe
Alkassim (Abuja)

The United Nations and the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS) yesterday warned Nigeria against violence in this year's general elections.

While the UN cautioned that if things go wrong in Nigeria, there would be serious consequences for the peace and stability of the entire region; the ECOWAS said if violence occurs in Nigeria, no other nation in the sub-region could accommodate Nigerian refugees.

They gave the warning in Jos, Plateau State Capital, at a mediation training and interactive engagement with the Inter-Party Advisory Council (IPAC) and other stakeholders, drawn from the North-Central and the North-East, on non-violence 2023 elections.

Over 30 persons have been reportedly killed and many others injured in the 2023 general elections-related violence in parts of the country.

There have also been series of attacks on offices of the Independent National Electoral Commission in parts of the country, especially the South-East, many of which were linked to the proscribed Indigenous People of Biafra (IPOB), leading to killing of several INEC staffers and security personnel.

Speaking at the session with IPAC, Sa'adatu Sha'abu, who represented the United Nations Office for West Africa and Sahel (UNOWAS), said: "If things go wrong in Nigeria, there'll be negative consequences for the peace and stability of the entire region."

Brown Odigie, ECOWAS Programme Officer, Mediation, charged all stakeholders on peaceful conduct of the 2023 elections.

Odigie, represented by the ECOWAS Commissioner for Political Affairs, Peace and Security, Abel Fatau, urged all candidates and their parties to uphold the signed peace accord and the electoral guidelines.

He stated: "This is a mediation often done in countries across ECOWAS region. We're doing it for Nigeria because it's a strategic member of ECOWAS."

"Nigeria has huge population. Election can generate conflict if not effectively managed. And when violence occurs, with the enormous population

- Huge campaign spending behind desperation— IPAC
- We must halt threats to elections Gbajabiamila
- INEC chair at Chatham House, assures on poll conduct of Nigeria, it can split to other neighboring countries. I can assure you that no member within the zone of ECOWAS has the capacity to accommodate refugees from Nigeria."

National Secretary, IPAC, Yusuf Dantalle, said politicians often get desperate because of huge election spending.

INEC chair at Chatham House, assures of poll conduct

The chairman of INEC, Prof. Mahmood Yakubu, yesterday reassured of the conduct of the 2023 elections despite the various attacks on the commission's facilities across the nation.

He spoke at the Royal Institute of International Affairs, also known as Chatham House, London, on, 'Nigeria's 2023 Elections: Preparations and Priorities for Electoral Integrity and Inclusion.'

Yakubu said between 2019 and 2022, INEC experienced 50 attacks on its facilities mostly in the form of arson and vandalism, during which buildings, election materials and vehicles were destroyed. "Sometimes, these attacks have even targeted staff."

He said the commission was determined to continue its preparations for the elections despite these attacks.

We must halt threats to elections-Gbajabiamila

The speaker of the House of Representatives, Femi Gbajabiamila, yesterday stressed the need to halt all threats to the conduct of the 2023 elections.

He spoke at the resumption of the House for plenary after its short recess.

He said, "As we approach the general elections, there has been a marked increase in incidents of insecurity and vicious attacks on political actors in parts of the country."

"We must unite to ensure this dangerous trend does not lead to circumstances that threaten the forthcoming elections."

Youths burn Niger police station to protest Catholic priest's killing

From Abubakar Akote, Minna

Youths on Tuesday burnt the divisional police station in Kafin Koro, a community in Paikoro LGA of Niger State to protest the killing of the Catholic Priest of St. Peters Catholic Church in the community, Rev. Fr. Isaac Achi, which occurred on Sunday.

Daily Trust had reported how gunmen who invaded the residence of Fr. Achi on the church premises set the building on fire when they could not gain entry.

Governor Sani Bello had imposed a 6pm to 6am curfew to prevent the breakdown of law and order.

Daily Trust gathered that women and youths had gathered Tuesday morning at the residence of the late priest to offer a special before the burial scheduled for Thursday.

Trouble started when women and youths who converged to offer prayers told the police team who came to offer protection to leave the scene.

The Police Public Relations Officer (PPRO) in the state, DSP Wasiu Abiodun, confirmed the burning of the station.

He said the incident happened when some angry youths of Kafin-Koro District protested against the killing of the priest.

He added that the value of items damaged and burnt had yet to be ascertained.

Abiodun said reinforcement teams led by the Deputy Commissioner of Police, Operations, had been dispatched to the scene and normalcy had been restored

Speaking on the protest, the Commissioner for Internal Security and Humanitarian Affairs, Emmanuel Umar, said while the state government was pained by the killing of the priest, it would not allow citizens to take the law into their hands and destroy government's facilities.

He said the government had not rested since the incident and called on the citizens to cooperate with authorities to enable them to do their job.

Troops kill several bandits in Sokoto, Kaduna

From Abubakar Auwal (Sokoto) & Mohammed Ibrahim Yaba (Kaduna)

Military fighter jets, on Monday, killed bandits at Rarah village in Rabah LGA of Sokoto State.

The member representing the area in the Sokoto State House of Assembly, Abdullahi Zakari, said the military bombardment took place in three different places, leading to the deaths of many of the bandits.

He said the bandits were returning from their illegal operations when they were neutralized.

"They attacked about 17 villages, killed three people, and rustled several animals," he said.

Zakari described the military operation as the most successful in recent times.

"The way they responded to our distress call and even mobilised their fighter jets, is highly commendable. We hope they will sustain the tempo because bandits have been terrorising our people for years unchecked," he said.

Checks revealed that the bandits attacked some villages in Kware and Rabah before coming under heavy bombardment at Rarah village.

A resident of Rarah, Ibrahim Rarah, said they counted over 16 mutilated bodies of the assailants in one of the areas.

When contacted the Police Public Relations Officer, DSP Sanusi Abubakar, said he was not officially informed about the incident and promised to call back when fully briefed.

Meanwhile, the Troops of Operation Forest Sanity have killed two bandits and cleared several hideouts in Chikun Local Government Area of Kaduna State during fighting patrols along the Kaboresha-Rijana Forest-Kuzo-Kujeni-Gwanto-Kachia axis.

The Kaduna State Commissioner for Ministry of Internal Security and Home Affairs, Samuel Aruwan, disclosed in a statement yesterday.

"The troops neutralized two bandits and recovered three motorcycles. The troops also raided bandits camps in the Kutura-Rijana general area," he said.

Aruwan said the bandits fled into the forest on sighting the troops, who then destroyed the camps and recovered three motorcycles, military uniforms and bandoliers.

Lagos police warn politicians, thugs to stay away from polling booths

From Eugene Agha Lagos

The Lagos State Commissioner of Police, Abiodun Alabi, on Thursday, warned all political parties in the state to eschew violence during and after the elections.

He gave the warning at a meeting with political parties and stakeholders on election security in Lagos.

Alabi warned political thugs, cultists and other troublemakers against disrupting the electoral process.

"Parents should equally warn their children to be law-abiding because we won't listen to anybody when we arrest any troublemaker.

"We want to assure you that no cultists or political thugs would be allowed in the state. We are going to ensure that no political party's supporters would be intimidated in the state," he added.

The CP advised aspirants who may wish to have police details to apply to the command and state the reason for such a request.

The Lagos State Residents Electoral Commission, Mr Olusegun Agbaje, who was represented by the Administrative Secretary, Mr Adebisi Oladapo, said INEC was ready for the election.

He however pleaded with party members, aspirants and their followers to play by the rules of the election.

Yobe cargo airport has best int'l aviation equipment - Buni

Governor Mai Mala Buni has said the recently commissioned Yobe State Cargo Airport, which was named after President Muhammadu Buhari, has been equipped with the best international aviation equipment for safe landing and take-off.

The governor stated this while speaking about the airport at a gala night organised in honour of President Buhari during his two-day visit in Damaturu.

He said his administration decided to complete the project which was started by his predecessor after due consultation on its economic importance to the state and the country as a whole.

Buni said: "After assumption of office, we were confronted with a heated argument of whether we should complete the international cargo airport initiated by our predecessors or not.

"However, after a careful assessment, we came up with the conclusion to complete the project and open the state to the outside world.

"We also believed that abandoning the airport would be a complete waste of resources already injected into the project. I am fulfilled that the project has been completed and commissioned today by Mr. President.

"The airport covers an area of 15km by 7km. The runway was 3.6km by 45m with 1000m of emergency access road and both end and loading weight of over 400 tons.

"It may interest Mr. President to note that the airport has international standard equipment for safe landing and take-off which was certified by NCAA, NIMET and EIA. It also has Control Watch Tower, three 800KVA generators and power-back-up, 2.5MVA transformer, fire-fighting equipment, meteorological equipment, DME, DVOR, ILS, AWOS, LLWAS, terminal building, administrative blocks, apron, taxi way, police post, among others.

"The total sum of thirty seven billion, nine hundred and seventy nine million, six hundred and eighty one thousand, six hundred and ninety nine Naira, fifty six Kobo (N37, 979, 681, 699.56) was expended for the construction of the airport."

He added, "I wish to inform this gathering that already, some international companies in Europe and the Middle East have indicated interest to commence international trade in Sesame seeds and livestock as soon as the airport commences operation.

"Today, we have to our advantage the International Cargo Airport and several newly constructed roads to facilitate haulage and movement of goods and services, as well as storage facilities in the newly completed modern markets in Nguru, Gashua, and Damaturu, while Potiskum is nearing completion with a new contract signed for construction of the Geidam Modern Market.

"These facilities will no doubt improve the scale and volume of trade across the state thereby boosting the economy of individuals and the state government."

Buni to new police recruits: Be good ambassadors of Yobe

Governor Mai Mala Buni of Yobe State has charged the new 23 constable police recruits of the state extraction that recently passed out at the Police Training College to be good ambassadors of the state.

The governor gave the charge while addressing the new constables in a statement issued by the Director General, Press Affairs and Media, Alhaji Mamman Mohammed.

"You are among the few privileged to have the opportunity to serve the country, you should exhibit a high sense of patriotism while executing your duties," he advised.

He assured them that the Yobe state government will always support them to excel in their chosen career.

The 23 constables assured Governor Buni that they would make the state proud wherever they found themselves in the course of their duties.

Buni had since inception been encouraging indigenes of the state to participate in police, military among other paramilitary organisations with a view to filling the state's quota at the federal level.

Yobe pledges to support mobile phone business owners

The Yobe State Ministry of Wealth Creation, Empowerment and Employment Generation, has said the administration of Mai Mala Buni remained committed to supporting the members of the Association of Mobile Phones and Allied Products Traders of Nigeria (AMPAT) as they seek more ways to expand GSM phone-related businesses and services across the state and attract more youths into its ranks.

The commissioner in charge of the ministry, Abdullahi Bego, stated this when he hosted the leadership of the association in Damaturu.

The visit according to a statement from the ministry followed the AMPAT's leadership courtesy call earlier paid to Governor Buni to appreciate him for his passion and determination to support micro, small and medium businesses in the state.

Bego expressed happiness that the association has hundreds of active members across the state many of whom are youths.

"I was impressed to hear from AMPAT chairman, Mohammed Kachallah, that the association has more than 10,000 members across the 17 local government areas of the state and that more youths are turning up to join GSM phone-related businesses.

"I assured the association that in keeping with Governor Mai Mala Buni's commitment to providing material and training support to AMPAT members, our ministry will work closely with them and the Yobe Information Technology Development Agency (YITDA) to provide tools, kits, and training so that more AMPAT members have the knowledge and skills they need to become more nimble and more professional in their chosen businesses.

"The Yobe state government's support to AMPAT syncs closely with the determination of His Excellency, Governor Buni to provide up to 13,000 people with various empowerment support in the weeks and months ahead," the commissioner added.

Yobe gov appoints Talba Special Adviser

Governor Mai Mala Buni of Yobe State has approved the appointment of Senator Adamu Garba Talba as the Special Adviser on Rural Electrification.

A statement issued by the Press Secretary to the Secretary to the State Government (SSG), Alhaji Shu'aibu Abdullahi, read: "His Excellency, the Executive Governor of Yobe State, Mai Mala Buni, has approved the appointment of Senator Adamu Garba Talba as Special Adviser on Rural Electrification.

"The appointment takes immediate effect."

KANO STATE GOVERNMENT

INAUGURATION OF A NATIONAL CONFERENCE COMMITTEE ON LIVESTOCK REFORMS AND MITIGATION OF ASSOCIATED CONFLICTS

Concerned and worried by the persistent conflicts and violent clashes between herders and farmers which most of the times lead to loss of properties and lives across the country, the Kano State Governor, Dr. Abdullahi Umar Ganduje OFR, in his characteristic patriotism and nationalism, is always at the forefront in searching for feasible solutions to problems confronting his state and the nation in general.

CSOs task Buhari to address N89trn stamp duty fraud

From Salim Umar Ibrahim, Kano

The Conference of Northern States Civil Society Networks has called on President Muhammadu Buhari to address issues around the alleged N89trn stamp duty fraud.

The conference is a forum of civil society networks operating in the 19 Northern states of Nigeria and Abuja.

A statement jointly signed by 20 state chairmen of the coalition of the CSOs asked the president to address the nation on the status of the alleged undercover committee set up to investigate and recover the accumulated stamp duty money in the interest of public trust and transparency.

The statement said, "We are worried about the purported humongous sums of money said to have been manipulated by some few individuals, while we continuously pass and sign into law appropriation bills with huge deficits, and whose implementation largely depends on borrowings.

"We feel uneasy on the increasing Nigerian debt profile, and wonder how our nation, shall magically plan to survive with these humongous deficits in our annual national budgets.

"Sir, Hon. Muhammad Gudaji Kazaure, a member of the National Assembly representing the people of Kazaure, Roni, Gwiwa and Yankwashi Federal Constituency in Jigawa State, had on several platforms claimed that you had set up an undercover presidential committee headed by one Mr Adetola Adekoya to investigate the long accumulated stamp duty revenues.

The statement added, "In our humble opinion, it will be a major disservice to the nation, if you, as the Grand Commander of the Federal Republic of Nigeria, continue to remain silent on this sensitive national issue, which has not only captured the attention of all Nigerians, but also the international communities."

"This assertion is not only too sensitive to capture your attention but also the glaring desire to clear the air and vindicate the reputation of your administration, as some government officials were fingered in the alleged mess, as well as to save the integrity of our dear country, which is currently at stake,"

Black marketers' vehicle loaded with fuel jerricans catch fire

From Salim Umar Ibrahim, Kano

A Sharon minibus loaded with jerricans containing fuel went up in flame at the entrance of the Nigerian National Petroleum Company (NNPC) filling station at Club road by Murtala Muhammad way in Kano.

This came amid fuel scarcity in Kano and its environs with many filling stations across the state selling above the official pump price.

An eyewitness said the vehicle burst into fire as the driver was about to go out of the filling station around 5pm on Tuesday.

Daily Trust learnt that while no life was lost in the incident but the driver sustained burns and ran away from the scene of the incident.

Jafar Muhammad Ahmad popularly known as Sanjo Badawa who spoke to our reporter said the attendants ignored motorists and served only the vehicle.

"Honestly, there were more than 300 motorcyclists inside the filling station but they refused to attend to us. They were just serving the black market operators.

"One vehicle will buy fuel worth N500,000 alone taking too much time while others are waiting. They brought the fuel today around 11am but they didn't start selling until 5pm," he added.

INSIDE POLITICS

“ This is election season. So, you will see and hear from snake-oil salespeople, false prophets and purveyors of false hope. There is, therefore, need for caution — Atiku Abubakar, PDP presidential candidate

INEC to conduct ‘mock accreditation’ ahead of polls

By Abbas Jimoh

Ahead of this year’s general elections, the Independent National Electoral Commission (INEC) has said it will conduct a nationwide mock accreditation to strengthen the technologies that would be deployed for the elections.

The INEC chairman, Prof. Mahmood Yakubu, said this on Tuesday at The Royal Institute of International Affairs, also known as Chatham House, London, United Kingdom.

Yakubu who spoke on, ‘Nigeria’s 2023 Elections: Preparations and Priorities for Electoral Integrity and Inclusion’ also responded to questions with regard to the commission’s plans for the conduct of this year’s general elections.

He said the mock accreditation would be carried out across selected polling units (PUs) to ascertain the integrity of the Bimodal Voter Accreditation System (BVAS), before the main elections, less than 40 days away.

The INEC boss, however, said every BVAS machine deployed across the 774 local governments had been tested, assuring that the functionality of the machines was impressive.

He added that back-up BVAS machines have been readily provided in case of system glitches.

“We have the machines for the 2023 elections but we didn’t want to take chances. Each and every machine has been tested and confirmed functional. For the last two weeks, our officials were in the 36 states of the federation testing these machines, and the functionality is simply encouraging.

“The second thing we are going to do, and pretty soon, is to conduct a mock accreditation exercise nationwide ahead of the elections. We won’t wait until the main elections come. We will test the integrity of these machines with real life voters in selected polling units across the country.

“We did so in Ekiti and Osun; it was fantastic and we’re going to do so nationwide,” Yakubu said.

I’ll sweep away corruption, money laundering – Tinubu

From Mumini Abdulkareem, Ilorin

Presidential candidate of the All Progressives Congress (APC), Asiwaju Bola Ahmed Tinubu, on Tuesday said his administration will tackle the menace of money laundering and other forms of corruption if elected.

The APC candidate said this during the party’s presidential campaign rally held in Ilorin, the Kwara State capital.

He said, “Let me congratulate you for your freedom four years ago which we are reasserting today. If you’re ready to cement that freedom to democracy, go and get your PVC to return the party and all its candidates.

“The broom is the symbol of freedom and with that, we have swept and will continue to sweep corruption, money laundering, and all other vices away including insecurity if elected.

“You heard yesterday that this would not happen but you can see it now live.”

Tinubu told the crowd at the Metropolitan Square, venue of the programme, not to “vote for anybody else, but me and all other candidates of the party across board in all the elections.”

He said the party believes in Governor AbdulRahman AbdulRazaq, who has been in a heated battle with Alhaji Lai Mohammed, Minister of Information.

Mohammed was among the APC chieftains who attended the rally.

“Don’t vote for anybody but me. We believe in AbdulRahman AbdulRazaq. The governor has done some good jobs and he wants another term of four years to continue. With your vote and support, that is guaranteed,” he said.

Lawmakers must work despite campaigns – Gbajabiamila

By Balarabe Alkassim

The Speaker of the House of Representatives, Femi Gbajabiamila, has said that federal lawmakers must continue to perform their statutory functions despite the distractions of political campaigns.

He stated this in his address at the resumption of the house’s plenary on Tuesday. He, however, assured that the 9th National Assembly will pass all pending bills before it before the legislative year elapses in June this year.

He said there are several bills that are still undergoing legislative process which need to be passed.

He said the bills, when passed and assented to, would have significant impacts on different sectors of Nigeria’s socio-economic spheres.

Gbajabiamila said, “It is imperative that the house focuses its efforts on completing the tasks it has already initiated and closing out the assignments on which the legacy of the 9th house will be assessed.

“We must resolve to continue to do the people’s work despite the obligations and distractions of the political campaign season.

“As we approach the end of our term in office, I am hopeful that we will continue to meet and exceed expectations in this New Year.”

Kaduna: Quality education, my priority – Uba Sani

From Mohammed I. Yaba, Kaduna

The Kaduna State gubernatorial candidate of the All Progressives Congress (APC), Senator Uba Sani, has promised to prioritise education if elected.

Sani, who disclosed this at Giwa town on Tuesday at the flag-off of the APC campaign rally in Kaduna, noted that Governor Nasir El Rufai brought back the lost glory of public schools.

“My priority is to make quality education accessible to the siblings of the common man because that will guarantee them a better future and improve society at large,” he added.

Governor El Rufai urged the people to vote Uba Sani as his successor and Dr Hadiza Balarabe as his deputy because “they were part of the team that enabled the transformation of Kaduna State under my leadership.”

Atiku renews $10bn youth empowerment pledge

● Mocks Ekiti gov’t over botched attempt to frustrate campaign

From Raphael Ogbonnaiye, Ado-Ekiti

The presidential candidate of the Peoples Democratic Party, Atiku Abubakar, has restated his pledge to earmark US$10 billion for women and youth empowerment if elected president.

Atiku stated this while addressing party supporters in Ado Ekiti, the Ekiti State capital, on Tuesday.

He said Ekiti has more educated persons than anywhere else in Nigeria, pledging to tap into the rich intellectual endowment of the state population to run the country.

Atiku also took a swipe at the state government over its alleged botched attempt to stop PDP supporters from attending his campaign rally by causing artificial scarcity of the petroleum product.

He said, “I can assure you that a PDP federal government will make use of the human capital that God has endowed you with in Ekiti. It is your gift from God and we shall utilise that human resources that God has given you.

“Besides, we want to make sure that our young men and women have businesses to do, and have sources of income.

“That is why I pledge to set aside ten billion US dollars so that those young men and women who want to get involved in enterprises will be given loans and capital so that they can achieve their lifetime ambition.

“When I came here today, what I saw almost brought tears to my eyes; when we came here some people said we are not going to see anybody in Ekiti. We realised what they meant was to cripple public transportation in Ado-Ekiti and the whole of Ekiti State.

“Again, they did not stop there; they also caused an artificial scarcity of the petroleum product so that even if you have your motorcycle, your car, you will not be able to move.

“What I can assure you is that if you vote PDP into power, the way you have made us happy today, we will also make you happy in Ekiti state.”

I will change Adamawa’s fortunes – Binani

By Amina Abdullahi, Yola

The All Progressives Congress (APC) gubernatorial candidate in Adamawa State, Senator Aishatu Dahiru Binani, has pledged to use her political influence and connection to change the fortunes of the state if elected.

Binani made the pledge yesterday at her campaign rally in Toungo Local Government Area of the state.

She called on the electorate to vote for all APC candidates from presidency to councillorship positions to enjoy more dividends of democracy.

Speaking at the event, an APC stalwart and a political chieftain, Alhaji Mansor Toungo, assured Binani of his people’s total support.

He charged his teaming supporters and electorate to vote for the senator.

Hon. Abdulrazaq Namdaz, a member of the House of Representatives from Adamawa, said: “My people, Senator Binani would make history in our state as the first woman to be elected executive governor by the grace of God. So, vote for her.”

Eti-Osa: Obanikoro's son, Banky W set for replay battle

With less than 50 days for the election of federal lawmakers, the contest for the Eti-Osa federal constituency of Lagos State is expected to be a straight battle between the incumbent lawmaker, Hon. Ibrahim Babajide Obanikoro (IBO) and popular entertainer, Olubankole Wellington, popularly known as Banky W.

The duo contested for the seat in the green chamber in 2019 with Ibrahim, the son of a former senator and Minister of State for Defence, Musiliu Obanikoro, emerging victorious at the end of the exercise.

The candidate of the ruling All Progressives Congress (APC), Ibrahim, popularly known as IBO, polled 22,250 votes to defeat Anthony Akala Bakare of the Peoples Democratic Party (PDP) who had 18,767 and Banky W of Modern Democratic Party who recorded 7,130 votes.

However, the 2023 poll is expected to be a stern contest between Ibrahim and Banky W, who is now the candidate of the PDP. The musician turned politician believed he stands a better chance at the poll this time considering some of the successes he recorded under then little-known MDP.

Banky W, defeated APC at Vice President Yemi Osinbajo's polling unit at the Victoria Garden City in 2019, polling 186 votes to place second behind Bakare of the PDP who polled 244 while Obanikoro had 167 votes. He also won his polling unit in Lekki with 575 votes against PDP's 540 and APC's 454.

The filmmaker who explained that the decision to join politics was driven by his desire for good governance in the country, expressed confidence in defeating the APC which has dominated the constituency and the state over the years.

"As long as I have been relevant in the art world, music, film and as a small entrepreneur, I have always been very vocal about the need for good governance and the need for young people to participate in politics," he said in a recent interview.

While noting that the introduction of the Bimodal Voter Accreditation System (BIVAS) by the Independent National Electoral Commission (INEC) would make rigging almost impossible, he said more Nigerians are getting interested in the electoral process.

"The fact that the Electoral Act was passed has done amazing things for our democracy, because now this election will be won or lost at each individual's polling unit. No one can go in a room somewhere in a collation centre and thumb print hundreds of ballots for their candidates. Now, you actually have to win the votes," the PDP candidate said.

Ibrahim

However, Obanikoro who said he is seeking a second term to provide more dividends of democracy to his constituents expressed optimism that the APC would retain the seat in the green chamber based on his performance.

"With the feedback we are getting from the constituents, my chance is extremely high. I am confident that my constituents are satisfied with my performance so far and also understand the importance of continuity," he said in an exclusive interview with Daily Trust.

Obanikoro who noted that experience and continuity matter at the National Assembly because there is hierarchy in standing as there are 360 representatives pulling from the same basket stressed that he had championed many bills, empowered youths and women as well as facilitated developmental projects in his constituency.

"My major achievements are the facilitation of two standard healthcare facilities in Eti-Osa. I also facilitated the construction of over 4 blocks of 3 classroom buildings in different schools across Eti-Osa to help with our children's education.

"I also launched a free school bus scheme that runs from Ajah down to Osborne for students. I have facilitated the rehabilitation of 8 roads across Eti-Osa in areas such as Ajah, Obalende, 1004 Estate in VI, Ado, Osapa and Iroko Awẹ. I have facilitated the supply and installation of over 700 solar-powered street lights in Obalende, Ilasan, Ikoyi, Agungi, Itedo, Ado, Badore, Gbara, Igbokoshu and Ira Nla

Eti-Osa is a strategic constituency consisting of important areas in Lagos including Ajah, Victoria Island and Lekki. In fact, the home of APC presidential candidate, Asiwaju Bola Tinubu on the highbrow Bourdillon and that of his bitter rival and long-time PDP leader in the state, Bode George, on Lugard, Ikoyi fall within this constituency areas. Also like I said, within the period of my term, I have moved five bills which three have been moved and presented and two are still pending," he added.

Securing tickets

However, securing the tickets of their political parties was not an easy ride for the duo who share the same year of birth - 1981. For Obanikoro, the leadership of the party had to intervene after Prince Oyekanmi Elegushi reportedly defeated him in the primary.

Elegushi who polled 25 votes against Obanikoro's 23 votes at the primary, said he relinquished the ticket in obedience to the party and its leadership.

"While pledging his loyalty to the party, he (Elegushi) appealed to his supporters to respect the decision of the party and ensure all the candidates of the party are returned elected in the 2023 elections," noted his media aide, Tobi Etti, on his withdrawal from the race.

The return ticket for Ibrahim was a saving grace for the Obanikoro's family as the father, Musiliu, lost the Lagos West Senatorial ticket to a former deputy governor, Idiat Adebule.

Banky W had to settle for a rerun primary to secure the ticket of the party, two weeks after he was earlier declared winner in the election but the result slip showed his challenger, Sam Aiboni, as the winner.

The party called for a rerun which he won with a landslide of 24 votes to 5.

Voters' Apathy

Eti-Osa is a strategic constituency consisting of important areas in Lagos including Ajah, Victoria Island and Lekki. In fact, the home of APC presidential candidate, Asiwaju Bola Tinubu on the highbrow Bourdillon and that of his bitter rival and long-time PDP leader in the state, Bode George, on Lugard, Ikoyi fall within this constituency.

However, elections in the constituency in recent times have been greeted with voters' apathy as winners emerged in 2015 and 2019 with less than 30,000 votes. The total votes cast in 2019 were 51,579 in a constituency with over 250,000 registered voters.

However, this was still among the highest as some constituencies recorded less than 20,000 total votes cast. Aside from Alimosho, no federal constituency had up to 100,000 votes. For instance, Speaker Femi Gbajabamila had 14,617 votes to win his seat while the total vote cast in his Surulere 1 constituency was 23,024.

Despite having the highest number of registered voters in the country, voters' turnout in Lagos has not been too impressive.

According to political analysts, the ability to mobilise first time voters as well as passive citizens to be active in the 2023 polls might be a major determinant for eventual winners.

Mass resignation hits BBC Hausa

● 9 journalists resign, join Turkish media

By Afeez Hanafi

At least nine journalists with the BBC Hausa Service in Nigeria have resigned in the last one month in what is described as “unprecedented” in the history of the international media outlet.

Daily Trust learnt that the affected staff members comprised two senior digital journalists, three social media journalists – two of whom are senior reporters – a senior bilingual reporter for Hausa/English Africa, a multimedia reporter and two video journalists.

It was gathered that while five of the journalists left last December; the four others resigned on Monday to join newly established Africa section of Turkish Radio and Television (TRT) in Istanbul.

“This is unprecedented in the history of BBC Hausa. Nine journalists of BBC Hausa have joined soon-to-be-launch TRT Hausa after the Turkish government decided to establish TRT Africa: Hausa, Swahili, French and English for Africa,” a source at the BBC confided in our correspondent.

The source said Nasidi Adamu Yahaya, who resigned as senior digital journalist, would head the Hausa service at TRT, with another senior journalist, Halima Umar Saleh, as his deputy.

Asked what led to the mass resignation, one of the journalists, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said they were primarily motivated by the Turkish media’s resolve to tell positive stories in Africa.

He said: “TRT wants us to change the narrative of storytelling. Other international media organisations have been reporting mainly hunger, wars and other negative narratives about Africa. There are good, positive stories in Africa – business and employment opportunities. There are cultural values, sports, innovations; people that are involved in artificial intelligence-related work. These are what TRT Hausa Service will be covering. Many international media are not reporting these things.

“We’re not saying we’re not going to report Boko Haram, banditry and others, but we have other positive stories.

There are human angle stories on Boko Haram. We want to give Africans voices. People should be heard about their positive stories; not just negative stories always.”

The journalist, who also described the resignations as “unprecedented,” confirmed that “the last set of journalists tendered their resignation letters today (Monday).”

“Some of them are leaving today while others will leave in few days’ time. Five of us left in December. In Nigeria, BBC Hausa has more than 40 journalists, but now, about one third of us are leaving. It has never happened in BBC Hausa Service,” he added.

China’s population shrinks first time in over 60 years

China’s population shrank last year for the first time in more than six decades, official data showed yesterday, as the birth rate slows in the face of mounting financial pressures and shifting social attitudes.

The world’s most populous country is facing a looming demographic crisis as its workforce ages, which analysts warn could stymie economic growth and pile pressure on strained public coffers.

Analysts point to the soaring cost of living as well as a growing number of women in the workforce and seeking higher education as reasons behind the slowdown.

“Who dares to have kids?” a Shanghai resident in his thirties said Tuesday.

“The unemployment rate is so high, COVID destroyed everything, there’s nothing we can do. Next year we’ll have declining growth again.”

The mainland Chinese population stood at around 1,411,750,000 at the end of 2022, the National Bureau of Statistics (NBS) reported a decrease of 850,000 from the end of the previous year.

The number of births was 9.56 million, the NBS said, while the number of deaths stood at 10.41 million.

The last time China’s population declined was in the early 1960s when the country was battling the worst famine in its modern history, a result of the disastrous Mao Zedong agricultural policy known as the Great Leap Forward.

China ended its strict one-child policy — imposed in the 1980s owing to fears of overpopulation — in 2016 and began allowing couples to have three children in 2021.

But that has failed to reverse the demographic decline for a country that has long relied on its vast workforce as a driver of economic growth.

“The population will likely trend down from here in coming years,” Zhiwei Zhang of Pinpoint Asset Management said.

“China cannot rely on the demographic dividend as a structural driver for economic growth,” he added.

“Economic growth will have to depend more on productivity growth, which is driven by government policies.”

Paris Club refunds: Court summons Emefiele over $53m judgment debt

By John Chuks Azu

A Federal High Court in Abuja has asked the governor of the Central Bank of Nigeria (CBN), Godwin Emefiele, to appear today over a $53m judgement debt arising from the Paris Club refunds.

Justice Inyang Ekwo, in an application for garnishee made on October 20, 2022, ordered Emefiele to appear today as the hearing date for the matter.

The order followed the application by a Senior Advocate of Nigeria, Joe Agi, against Linas International Ltd, the Minister of Finance and the CBN through his lawyers, Isaac Ekpa and Chinonso Obasi, seeking an order directing the Inspector-General of Police to arrest Emefiele and bring him to court alongside his lawyers:

Damian Dodo, Audu Anuga, all Senior Advocates of Nigeria, and Ginika Ezeoke, Jessica Iyoke, Abdullahi Afolayan and Olayemi Afolayan.

The suit arose over an alleged $70m judgment against Linas over the lawyer’s services in the Paris Club refund, which Emefiele was said to have released only $17m leaving an outstanding $53m.

The court had on January 23, 2020 ruled that Emefiele must appear “to be examined on oath touching the means you’ve or have had, since the date of the said garnishee order absolute, to pay the balance of $53m now due and payable under the said garnishee order absolute and also show cause why you should not be committed to prison for default in payment of the said sum.”

ASUU risks deregistration over non-submission of audited accounts – FG

By Idowu Isamotu

The Minister of Labour and Employment, Chris Ngige, says the Academic Staff Union of Universities (ASUU) is due for deregistration for failing to submit its audited accounts for over four years on how the check-off dues of its members were spent.

Ngige spoke to reporters in Abuja after meeting with the leaderships of the Congress of University Academics (CONUA) and the National Association of Medical and Dental Academics (NAMDA) led by their president and vice president, Niyi Sunmonu.

He said the government had put all security agencies on the alert to protect CONUA members against any attack from ASUU.

He finalised the registration of the two newly registered unions, CONUA and NAMDA, by formally presenting the official gazette, Trade Dispute Act and the official certificate of registration to their leaders, while charging them not to shut down the universities again.

The minister ordered CONUA and NAMDA to operate fully without fear of intimidation, saying that the government decided to “break monolithic nature of ASUU because of the damages done to the university systems.”

It's time to take African researchers seriously

By Abdelrahman Hassan & Shikha Goyal

In the quest for the data and evidence needed to solve Africa's most complex education problems, one group is routinely left out — the African researchers themselves.

Not only would including them constitute an important step towards justice and equity, rooting education research in local realities is the pathway towards more effective policies and programmatic outcomes.

In Kenya, the COVID-19 pandemic made this abundantly clear. By mid-2021, almost 17 million Kenyans were out of school. The ministry of education opted for digital learning through online classes, television and radio programmes, planning to fully continue learning online during the pandemic.

Usawa Agenda (Usawa), a local education research organisation, took the initiative to understand the effectiveness of this approach. Usawa Agenda rapidly mobilised its broad network of local researchers and launched a national survey targeting nearly all of Kenya's 47 counties to better understand the needs and problems of the pupils, especially those living in marginalised contexts.

The problems raised by this evidence included suboptimal digital infrastructure, lack of access to digital learning, lack of preparedness by the teachers and disillusionment from parents.

In the face of such deep and community-based analysis that remote learning would, against its own intention, widen learning inequities and disproportionately hurt the most vulnerable children and youth, the government revamped the rollout of the programme. Soon thereafter, the government opted instead to close schools completely until all pupils could safely return to in-person learning.

Several factors contributed to Usawa's success: proximity to the local context, thoughtful and thorough engagement with local stakeholders including the government, and working directly with people to name a few.

But perhaps the most critical reason is that Usawa is a local research organisation, based in and led by local leaders who hold the familiarity, trust and legitimacy of the local people and the broader education ecosystem.

Stories like this, unfortunately, are few and far between. In 2016, research produced in Africa accounted for just three per cent of global research output. The scarcity of African research is at least partially because of a lack of funding. More than 80 per cent of locally-led education research in Africa is considered underfunded, a far higher figure than in the Global North.

Funders are in a unique position to change who gets funding for research. In recent years, we have witnessed philanthropic funding playing an important role in the local education research ecosystem. Donors often issue funding in verticals, earmarked for specific short-term projects and through a variety of intermediaries.

Donors also rarely work together in a coordinated manner, perhaps because their strategic and operational priorities differ. In many contexts, several of these factors operate simultaneously. For the local education researcher, this all represents a precarious and convoluted path to mobilise the resources needed to conduct research.

Yet for Africa, the need for home-grown, evidence-informed education programmes has never been more pressing. Earlier this year, with Echidna Giving, the Gates Foundation and Porticus, we hosted the Forum for Education Research in/for/by Africa, bringing together researchers, educators, professors, advocates and others in the education world to rethink the way international funding could be more intentional in supporting African-led research.

Stories like this, unfortunately, are few and far between. In 2016, research produced in Africa accounted for just three per cent of global research output. The scarcity of African research is at least partially because of a lack of funding. More than 80 per cent of locally-led education research in Africa is considered underfunded, a far higher figure than in the Global North.

It was agreed that donor funding can do more to be more supportive of African-led and produced research, as it will enable African education researchers to forge their own pathway to African development and contribute to the wealth of global research.

While the immediate need is funding, attendees identified a broad and holistic universe of support components ranging from communications, technical capacity, partnerships, mentorship and regional collaboration.

Even more importantly, they highlighted that African researchers must also have access and rights to use the data they collect, allowing them the ownership and autonomy needed for them to apply in their own contexts.

Ideas abound, but more initiatives — fuelled by a shared vision and an audacious commitment to equity — are needed. With local research talent so well-placed to help improve African education, we need to level the playing field. African researchers are eager to tackle the problems their communities are facing. It's high time we gave them a chance to do so.

Northern voters need food not oil

Since the last election in 2019, the number of people suffering severe food insecurity has increased, as depicted in the 2022 multidimensional poverty index data. The hunger has made people show more anger towards the government because people are tired, weak and demoralised. One can attribute the problem to climate change, Russia's invasion of Ukraine, insecurity and bandit terrorism, drought and flood, among many other factors.

Little attention is paid to the existing and proposed government policies. These policies describe the government's goals, choices, and actions for political, social, and economic direction to ensure food security in the country. The long campaign season of the 2023 elections has made people more aware and have the time to identify a bogus campaign proposal.

For example, one presidential candidate has been singled out for proposing a spurious solution in the agricultural sector. That is the same candidate who never misses the opportunity to mock the northern states for reliance on oil revenue. He repeated the same rhetoric at Chatham House this week. When asked about his plans for the North during the Arewa Joint Committee conference in October, he said he planned to make commercial banks invest in the Bank of Agriculture. The proposal is infeasible. It also looks bad for his campaign because he is demonstrating a lack of knowledge of the private and agricultural sectors. A quick search would have enlightened him to know the corporate responsibilities of commercial banks.

The conventional wisdom attributed to Friedman says the social responsibility of a business is to increase its profit. As a former bank chairman, the candidate knows the risk of spending shareholders' money on a social, agricultural project will be like flogging a dead horse. Most of those listening to him at Arewa House are lifelong farmers, some are academics in agriculture, and some have even served in key positions in the agriculture ministry. They know the sectoral challenges and can detect bogus proposals from miles away. Even the multilateral agencies that advocate for neo-liberal policies in the country did not make such a proposition.

It is common knowledge that agriculture is the sector to rely upon to revive the economy because it is the largest employer in the country. Agriculture has been abandoned since the country found oil in the late 1960s, with the help of the oil boom in the 70s. As the country looks to diversify from oil dependency, it seems natural to consider agriculture. The benefit of agricultural revival will not be limited to Nigeria alone. The continent relies on Nigeria to return to its glory as one of the top 10 African countries producing 75 per cent of Africa's farm produce.

Farmers, the majority of northern voters, will be more enticed with campaign proposals that will revive the agricultural sector to secure food immediately, not some insha Allah oil extraction projects that require a decade to bear fruit.

Revisiting the Maputo Declaration is one proposition that can raise food security prospects and bring the northern electorate together. The Declaration is a comprehensive development policy adopted by African countries to close the gap between Africa and the rest of the world. It was agreed in 2002 under Obasanjo/Atiku administration under the pan-African action framework for agricultural development policy and strategy, New Partnership for Africa's Development (NEPAD). The aim was to attain average annual agricultural productivity growth of at least 5 per cent and set a target for public investment in agriculture equal to at least 10 per cent of national budgets.

The share of 10 per cent is high, and it was not achieved even under the Obasanjo/Atiku regime. The average budget share of the Ministry of Agriculture was four per cent with a maximum of 6.4 per cent. Since then, huge efforts have been made under Yar'adua and Jonathan with evidence of growth in the sector. However, since 2015 the investments have waned away. Between 2015-2023, the percentage share of the ministry of agriculture is as follows: 0.9%, 1.3%, 1.7%, 2%, 1.56%, 1.34%, 1.37%, 1.8%, and 1.1%. That is an average of 1.45% during the Buhari regime, a self-acclaimed farmer.

Currently, one cannot deny that Nigeria is not food secure. We can blame it on many factors, but if investments were made as agreed under The Maputo Declaration, the situation would not be as bad as this. International private firms like PwC are advocating for more government intervention by adopting the Maputo Declaration. Objectively speaking, the African Union has aligned with multilateral agencies and corporations on a policy that will benefit Nigeria's common households. Funding the agricultural budget will be supported by the Fiscal Responsibility Act of 2007, which supports borrowing for production.

We are in an election season, and choices must be made.

One presidential candidate has vowed to continue what this government is doing and using oil exploration tactics to entice voters - a similar tactic used by Buhari in 2019 - instead of addressing food security issues. We also highlighted another candidate whose proposal seemed to be dead on arrival. One can deduce that Obasanjo did not advise him to adopt the Maputo Declaration because it was not his original idea. As it stands, only one candidate is willing to revisit The Declaration, but it is not for me to say.

One thing for sure is for the candidates to know that voters may look stupid, but they are really not as stupid as they look. They have been fooled before, and it is less likely that it will happen in 2023.

Before we hire Diaspora doctors, nurses

The federal government has announced that it is considering hiring Nigerian doctors abroad to serve the medical needs of Nigerians back home. This announcement was made by the Minister of Health, Osagie Ehanire, recently in Abuja.

Even while the modality of how this scheme is going to work is being fleshed out, it is a major acknowledgement of the worrying exodus of doctors from the country. This mass migration of Nigerian-trained medical personnel to foreign hospitals has severely compromised the already rickety health sector in the country.

Just this October, the president of the Nigerian Medical Association (NMA), Rowland Ojinmah, announced that presently, at least 50 doctors leave the country every week to find employment elsewhere. Speaking at another symposium, Mr Ojinmah said 5,600 medical doctors have left Nigeria for greener pastures abroad in the last eight years alone. Coupled with the deplorable health infrastructure, this has put the country's health sector in the red.

The minister's proclamation is a recognition by the federal government of the need to either reverse the trend or utilise it to some advantage. The minister's proposal includes working out an arrangement for Nigerian doctors abroad to harness information technology to connect to medical personnel in Nigeria and offer training and consultancies. The programme will also see these doctors affiliated with medical institutions in Nigeria to facilitate their occasional return to offer training and capacity building.

While the minister acknowledged that labour mobility is increasing globally and doctors from other countries like the UK are migrating to places with better pay like New Zealand and Canada may be true, but the situation in Nigeria is at a level that calls for serious concern.

While this idea may not be entirely bad, it is necessary to stem the tide of the mass exodus of medical practitioners before trying to tease those who have left to come back in whatever capacity. This means that the crisis in the health sector needs to be addressed urgently.

As it is, resident doctors in the country may embark on yet another strike if the federal government does not meet their demands for, among other things, improved hazard allowances. This threat was contained in a letter by the president of the National Association of Resident Doctors (NARD), Emeka Orji, to the health minister, Ehanire, just last week.

It is not a secret that the entirety of the health sector needs reforms. Doctors, nurses and other support staff are underpaid and overworked. Many struggle to find decent accommodation and support systems to facilitate the discharge of their duties. This, coupled with insane work hours, patient overload, poor health facilities, most of which are in a deplorable state, and a shortage of required equipment, means that the health sector needs to be comprehensively reformed.

Equally important, government at all levels must take definite steps to develop local infrastructure for medical research and the manufacture of medical equipment to reduce reliance on importation. Many of our medical personnel leave the country out of frustration from the lack of diagnostic equipment. Boosting research will also engage many of them and help broaden their knowledge.

There is also the need for reforming our medical training in a way that harmonises the training of new doctors trained in foreign countries with those trained here at home. This will help to avoid the recurring situation whereby many potential doctors trained in several foreign countries like Ukraine, Russia, Hungary, etc, never get to practice here, thereby diminishing the number of doctors available to work here.

What the minister's plans will encourage at this point, is the continued exodus of medical personnel who will now look to earn improved pay in the countries they migrate to and also hope to cash out on this plan to hire them by the FG in this new role. In the end, this strategy if considered carefully may only be treating the symptom of the disease, not the disease itself.

We recognise the need to urgently address the brain drain, especially in the medical sector but whatever programme the government designs to address, this must start with addressing the causes of the mass migration in the first place. We recognise that hiring Nigerian experts in the diaspora is in line with global best practices, however, the modalities of this arrangement must be clearly thought out, and articulated in a way that weighs all the pros and cons and helps rather than hinder the attempt to revive the health sector.

This is a matter of national emergency and must be treated as such.

Between electioneering promises and Nigeria's social reality

There was a story told about a political rally where the politicians promised the people of a certain locality that, if voted into power, they would eradicate the mosquitoes that were responsible for the incidence of malaria in the place. To illustrate his point, the campaign team displayed posters showing the mosquitoes they were referring to.

But the people were not to be fooled; they knew their problems. So, to the politician's surprise, the people replied that they did not have those types of mosquitoes displayed on the posters.

We are back to those days once again, as our politicians accompanied by their media strategists are busy painting for us pictures of an Eldorado they will soon unleash on us, once we give them our mandate come next month. Indeed, electioneering time has become the best time to live in Nigeria. At such a time, as we are experiencing now, we are jolted from our poverty-riddled psyches to glimpses of beauty that can be our lot here in Nigeria.

This blame is not only for the current politicians, some of whom may be somewhere close to where you are now, and listing the various things they will do for your community, your local government, and even your state. They are simply continuing the tradition that has kept Nigeria where it is right now.

This is the trouble with our politics, which has been captured by those who tell us they mean well for us, while in fact, they are on a different venture. If politics or political economy specifically is the art of managing resources for the good of all, then something has been wrong all along with the brand that has been practised in Nigeria so far. This brand of politics in Nigeria is one that focuses on the politicians rather than the people's welfare.

Otherwise, how come it is that we only get to hear or know how great this country or part of it could be only when elections are around the corner? They reel to us the problems they will solve for us and how our lives, as Nigerians say, will never be the same again. They remind us that this land is blessed with all the resources that are needed to turn it into something similar to any of the beautiful countries where the elite often jet out to enjoy life.

Ordinary Nigerians have always wondered aloud why it is that Nigerian politicians, who have dominated the corridors of power, forget that the things they enjoy abroad can also be good to the masses at home. When they go to Dubai, London, New York, and other beautiful places on earth, why do they think that Nigerians at home are allergic to such good things, and therefore should not be made to enjoy them here? When they go to countries where electricity is available all day, why can't they ask how those people achieved that, so we can replicate it here at home?

Nigerians are not allergic to travelling on good roads. So, why is it almost impossible for us to have good roads in Nigeria? Or, is it that we have not seen enough examples of good roads that we cannot build here? Or that the technology that supports the kind of infrastructure there can't be imported here? Or, is it that the models for financing good roads, even within affordable budgets, do not exist?

Somehow, each election cycle in Nigeria is just like a new beginning. It is as if the country has just begun and so we have to talk about the rudimentary things, just like the politicians whose campaign was to eradicate mosquitoes in that community.

As Robert Heilbroner has said in his book, The Worldly Philosophers: "The secret to economic growth lay in the fact that each generation attacked Nature not only with its own energies and resources but with the heritage of equipment accumulated by its forebears.

"And as that heritage grew – as each generation added its quota of new knowledge, factories, tools, and techniques to the wealth of the past, human productivity increased with astonishing rapidity."

But we do not seem to experience that creative addition cumulative buildup in the development of our economy. This explains why every four years, politicians dust their rusty strategy papers prepared for them by professional consultants and take over the airwaves in the name of political campaigns. That is because there is no continuity in the art of governance here. Each group, each dispensation comes with its own plan, which most of the time is totally different from what the nation needs.

Imagine that a certain fraction of campaign promises made to Nigerians has ever been faithfully implemented, whether in the health, or power, or energy sector, by any of the successive administrations. And that each administration added to what the previous ones built, and the next ones added their bit. What do you think would be the state of this economy today?

The tragedy of Nigeria today is this duality that marks our politics. While they are gleefully reeling from their sweet-sounding agendas or manifestos, there is actually an unwritten or unseen version that in fact is the one pencilled down for implementation.

This explains the fact that apart from one or two sectors, it is as if we are just starting all over in 2023. Take the power sector, for instance, where we are still shamefully struggling to produce enough electricity for Nigeria's population. This is in spite of all the billions of dollars that have been sunk into that sector.

Why do we still have as many as 20 million out-of-school children in a country that says the youths are the hope for the future? What kind of future will out-of-school, under-the-bridge children create? By failing to prepare this large army of unlearned, unskilled children we are in effect preparing for the kind of country that they will create and dominate.

That is part of our reality. Let's take a snapshot of today's Nigeria. In four years, let's compare and see what would have changed. When that time comes, let's hope that those asking for our votes today would be proud to own the new realities.

AfCFTA would stimulate intra-African trade - Buhari ... FG urged to dismantle tariff barriers

President Muhammadu Buhari, has said the African Continental Free Trade Agreement (AfCFTA) would be a game changer that will stimulate intra-African trade because the more ambitious the trade liberalization, the greater the expansion of Nigerian exports to its African partners.

Buhari, who was the special guest of honour at the ongoing three-day meeting of the Union of African Shippers' Council (UASC) holding in Lagos, said AfCFTA is expected to bring about a number of benefits that African producers would enjoy in terms of access to cheaper inputs and intermediate goods as well as larger markets for their products while consumers have access to cheaper goods and a broader variety of products.

The 9th edition of the African Shippers Day is with the theme: 'African Continental Free Trade Agreement: A Veritable Platform for African Shippers to Mainstream into Global Trade'

Buhari, who was represented by the Minister of State for Transport, Prince Ademola Adegoye said on their part African economies should experience gains from trade and further benefit from removing the onerous requirements belonging to multiple and overlapping trade agreements within the continent.

He said that the UN Economic Commission for AFRICA has forecasted that AfCFTA could boost intra-Africa trade by 62 percent with the industrial sector forecast to gain the most.

With this, he said GDP and exports would increase by $44billion and $56billion respectively and AfCFTA could potentially increase jobs and move informal traders into the formal sector.

Noting that digitalization has been transforming the way businesses are done in Africa, he recalled that digitalization in 2011 impacted the GDP of Africa by $8.3bn in addition to 600,000 jobs on the continent.

However, he said for AfCFTA to have positive influence on long-term investment in producing capacities, the African government must develop appropriate supporting policies, build the requisite infrastructure and ensure an educated workforce.

He said, "We need to actively promote productive employment and decent work place, women's empowerment and food security and reduction in inequalities".

Meanwhile the Executive Secretary of the Nigerian Shippers Council (NSC), Emmanuel Jime, has urged the Federal Government to dismantle various tariff and non-tariff barriers hindering trade facilitation.

The NSC boss said the removal of all tariffs would boost intra African trade and harness the potentials in AfCFTA.

Jime explained that trading within African countries was currently at a paltry 11 percent while Africa's trade to global trade was at a ridiculous three percent.

Jime in his welcome address said African leaders must embrace tariff liberalization to boost intra-African trade.

According to him, the re-orientation and re-organisation of intra-Africa trade should start from the West and Central Africa sub-region, noting that by the time the region gets it right, it will be easier for other sub-regions in the African continent to trade among themselves.

"I believe that AfCFTA is a very important tool to boost the African economy by increasing intra-African trade. When adequate measures are put in place to reduce tariff and non-tariff barriers that hamper trading between countries in the continent, then we will be on our way to achieving greater economic development for the continent.

"We all know that it is not an easy task, because a lot of things have been left undone in the past, but we can start now with great commitment and determination, we can achieve the Africa we all desire," he added.

Jime further stated that if potentials in the intra-African trade were effectively harnessed, the African economy would expand by 52.4 percent.

Colloquium In honour of late Otunba Kunle Folarin to hold on Thursday

Media Friends of Late Otunba Kunle Folarin in collaboration with the Nigerian Ports Consultative Council, NPCC, will hold a One-Day Colloquium in honour of the late maritime sage, on Thursday, January 19.

Captains of industry, dignitaries, friends, maritime journalists, associates and family members of the late sage who passed on November 8, 2022, will be in attendance.

A statement by the planning committee signed by Eguono Odjegba, revealed that the event is slated to take place at the Rockview Hotel, GRA Apapa Lagos and that it will be chaired by Capt. Emmanuel Iheanacho, with a lead presentation titled "Ensuring Effective Disbursement of Cabotage Vessel Financing" to be delivered by Jean Chiazor Anishere SAN.

"A panel of discussants on the topic includes the Director General, Nigerian Maritime Administration and Safety Agency (NIMASA); Dr Bashir Jamoh, Shipowners Association of Nigeria (SOAN) President, Dr. MkGeorge Onyong, Mrs. Funke Agbo, and a financial expert. The event is billed to begin by 9am prompt. The event is open to all maritime stakeholders," he said.

Truck drivers lament extortion of members on port access roads

Truck drivers under the aegis of the Council of Maritime Transport Unions and Associations (COMTUA) have cried out over extortion of members by touts along all access roads to the nation's seaports in Lagos.

The group called on relevant government agencies to address the issue, noting that the activities of touts, posted at the instance of the Maritime Workers Union Nigeria (MWUN), would further worsen the economy of the nation.

The group also expressed their deep frustration being experienced daily by its members in the course of discharging their lawful duty between Mile 2 and Sunrise bus stop.

A press statement signed by the National President of the council, Prince Adeyinka T. Aroyewun, narrated the gory details of excruciating torture, extortion and destruction of trucks its members face daily in the hands of touts who position themselves along port access roads and major highways in Lagos

It would be recalled that a tanker which fell into a ditch killing one person and seriously injuring another last week within the same axis, was said to be attempting to escape booby traps mounted by touts.

The statement noted sadly that this brazen illegality continues in broad daylight without any modicum of checks.

"In the face of all these nauseating experiences, we have remained law-abiding; instead of resorting to violence, we have made several petitions and official letters to Government (at different levels) bidding to have relevant Government Authorities call the miscreants to order, all to no avail as all our entreaties are not attended to.

"Truly, the body language of the Government is only a confirmation of the claim of the touts that they have the backing of the Government and that they work in absolute connivance", the COMTUA stated.

The statement noted that this brazen lawlessness leaves any rational being to query if the Government functions to encourage and support illegality and criminals who openly act against established law and order in the State.

SIFAX inland terminal records 8736 hours zero lost time Injury

SIFAX Inland Container Terminal, a subsidiary of SIFAX Group, has achieved a massive feat by recording 8,736 hours of zero lost time to injury (LTI) during operations at the terminal.

This was disclosed by Mr. Paul Linden, Managing Director, SIFAX Inland Container Terminal, during the company's Health, Safety and Environment (HSE) Week held recently.

According to Linden, after a few minor accidents recorded during the company's first year of operations between 2020 and 2021, the terminal's management did a thorough review and evaluation of its health and safety processes and procedures with a view to minimizing accidents in the terminal.

He said: "The terminal is glad to announce that we recorded zero accidents in the 2022 business year. This is a good one for us and we will improve on this in the coming years. I must applaud our HSE team for the thorough job of making sure that all staff and visitors comply with the policies of the terminal. Through their efforts we can roll out the drum to celebrate one year injury free workplace. A special thank you to all our staff for their cooperation too".

Mr. Godwin Okoyejaniche, Head of HSE,

■ SIFAX Terminal in Ijora, Lagos State

SIFAX ICT explained that the terminal was able to achieve this feat due to collaborative efforts of all stakeholders.

"We are celebrating the 2022 HSE Week to appreciate all our stakeholders for their support towards helping us achieve a zero LTI this year. We promise that the New Year 2023 will bring more possibilities for us all", he said.

Mr. Bode Ojienyi, Group Executive Director, SIFAX Group remarked that the Group's mantra of 'Safety First' has engineered a safe work environment for all its employees, clients and other stakeholders. He noted further that the company has invested heavily in health and safety equipment as well as training of its personnel in order to make the workplace safe.

'NLNG Bonny plant still in operation, despite force majeure'

The management of the Nigeria LNG Limited, on Monday, said that operations at its plant on Bonny Island, Rivers State, is still active despite a Force Majeure declared in October 2022 and feed gas supply challenges.

Recalled that LNG had, in October 2022, declared force majeure because of widespread flooding that disrupted supply.

But a statement by the General Manager, External Relations and Sustainable Development, Andy Odeh, revealed that the plant has continued to produce LNG and LPG that is commensurate to the feed gas it receives from its upstream gas suppliers.

Odeh said in addition to ensuring steady operation, NLNG remains committed to its culture of transparency and maintains consistent communication with key stakeholders on developments in the upstream sector.

"The company is closely monitoring the resolution of supply challenges by all relevant parties" he added.

The plan by the Nigerian government to raise an average of between N320b and N400b per month in bond sales has been described as too ambitious, which the debt market may find it difficult to absorb.

A schedule of the bond auction for the first quarter of 2023 seen by Daily Trust shows that the bonds are being re-opened, with each of them having a different term to their original maturities.

For instance, for January, the government will on the 30th re-open the 13.98% FGN FEB 2028, which has an original tenor of 10 years and currently has five years, one month to maturity.

The second bond for January is the 12.50% FGN APR 2032, with an original tenor of 15 years and now nine years and three months to maturity. The schedule says that the range of amount on offer for each of the bonds is between N80b and N100 b for each month.

The third offer for the month is the 16.2499% FGN APR 2037 bond, with a 20-year tenor and currently has 14 years and three months to maturity.

The fourth bond for January is 14.80% FGN APR 2049, a 30-year paper having 26 years and three months to maturity. According to the schedule, each of the bonds is to be re-offered in the succeeding month, with one month less in terms of maturity from the previous month.

February 13 is the auction date for the second month's offer, while March 20 is the auction date for the third month. However, market analysts have warned that the market may not have the capacity to absorb this quantum of issuance within the period, a bond analyst has said. "N320b to N400b a month? The market will scatter," the bond trader said to Daily Trust by phone from Lagos.

Yobe govt to empower 13,000 youths on ICT, phone repairs

From Habibu Idris Gimba, Damaturu

The Yobe State government has expressed its readiness to train over 13,000 people with various kinds of empowerment support in the weeks and months ahead.

The state Commissioner of Wealth Creation, Empowerment and Employment Generation, Mr Abdullahi Bego, stated this yesterday when he hosted the Association of Mobile Phones and Allied Products Traders of Nigeria (AMPAT), Yobe State chapter, in his office.

He said in a bid to boost the socio-economic activities of the state, Governor Mai Mala Buni is poised to support mobile phone business persons in the state.

He assured the commitments of Buni's administration to providing material and training support to AMPAT members.

"Our ministry will work closely with Mobile Phones and Allied Products Traders of Nigeria and the Yobe Information Technology Development Agency (YITDA) to provide tools, kits, and training," he said.

"More AMPAT members have the knowledge and skills you need to become more nimble and more professional in your chosen businesses," he added.

Earlier in his speech, AMPAT's chairman, Alhaji Mohammed Kachallah, said the association has more than 10,000 members across the 17 local government areas of the state and that more youths are turning up to join GSM phone-related businesses.

He said the association seeks more ways to expand GSM phone-related businesses and services across the state and attract more youths to its ranks.

Cracks in AON over Nigeria Air suit

From Abdullateef Aliyu, Lagos

The suit filed by the Airline Operators of Nigeria (AON) challenging the establishment of Nigeria Air has polarised the body of indigenous Airlines operating in Nigeria, Daily Trust can report.

This followed a countersuit brought before the Federal High Court Lagos Judicial Division handling the matter on Monday by two AON members of the Board of Trustees (BOT).

Though the court presided over by Justice Ambrose Lewis-Allagoa had on Monday adjourned the matter till February 13, the countersuit filed by the two members, a former Chairman of the AON and another operator, has introduced a new dimension into the matter.

The two operators are challenging the decision of the Incorporated Trustees of the AON including Azman Air Services Limited, Air Peace Limited, Max Air Limited, United Nigeria Airlines and Top Brass Aviation Limited who are plaintiffs in the suit, to file the action, claiming they are not representing them.

Our correspondent however learned that the application by the two AON members was countered by the Plaintiffs with the minute of a meeting of the AON where the decision to file the suit was taken.

It would be recalled that the AON had in November last year sued the government challenging its decision to select Ethiopian Airlines as the core investor for the proposed airline.

The defendants in the suit are Nigeria Air Limited, Ethiopian Airlines, Sen. Hadi Sirika and the Attorney General of the Federation.

The court had earlier granted an order stopping the government from going ahead with the project pending the determination of the motion on notice filed by the AON.

The government through its defence counsel has failed to set aside the order stopping the project.

On Friday, counsels to the federal government filed a fresh motion seeking the transfer of the case to Abuja but this was opposed by the AON which argued that all the airlines that filed the suit have their head offices in Lagos.

The government on its part also claimed that all the defendants operate in Abuja.

But the matter of jurisdiction is yet to be settled when the two AON members filed their countersuit.

But in adjourning the matter till February, the AON lawyer was given one week to study the request of the government for a transfer of the matter to Abuja.

This is expected to be heard before the substantive motion challenging the establishment of the airline would be heard.

A member of the AON who spoke with Daily Trust on the condition of anonymity yesterday said, "The case has been adjourned again till February which is about a week or two weeks to the election and the matter is not even ripe for hearing because of the jurisdictional application brought before the court.

"We remain resolute in challenging this and following the case to a logical conclusion. The truth is our members who brought a countersuit were at the AGM where the decision to challenge the establishment of Nigeria Air was taken but we are taken aback by the countersuit but we believe that Justice would be served by the court."

Senate blames finance minister, CBN gov for delay in reconsidering Buhari's N22.7trn loan restructuring

By Abdullateef Salau

The Senate on Tuesday blamed the finance minister, Zainab Ahmed, and Central Bank of Nigeria (CBN) governor, Godwin Emefiele, for the delay in reconsidering President Muhammadu Buhari's request to restructure the apex bank's N22.7trn loan.

President Buhari had, in December, asked the red chamber to restructure the CBN loan extended to the federal government under its Ways and Means advances to raise the amount to N23.7trn with a tenor of 40 years, three years moratorium on repayment and an interest rate of 9%.

But the request was suspended for lack of details with an ad hoc panel set up to interface with the finance minister and CBN governor for details on the N22.7 trillion loan.

President Buhari, while speaking after signing the 2023 budget, urged the National Assembly to reconsider its position on his proposal to securitise the federal government's outstanding Ways and Means balance at the CBN.

Speaking on the floor of the Senate on Tuesday, the panel's chairman, Senator Ibrahim Gobir, said he could not present the report of his committee because the information requested from the finance minister and CBN governor was not available.

He told the Senate that a series of attempts made by the committee to meet the officials for the required details proved abortive.

He said: "As a special committee for urgent and thorough assignment, we hit the ground running immediately after composition on 28th of December last year.

"For required details on the N22.7 trillion Ways and Means restructuring, six vital questions were raised; five for the CBN governor and one for the finance minister, but their trips abroad prevented us from asking them the questions.

"Now that they are around, we request the Senate to give us additional three days for thorough work on the assignment and submission of the report."

He, therefore, sought more time to turn in the panel's report.

Senate President Ahmad Lawan in his response said: "If there is a need for the Senate to sit up to Friday this week for thorough consideration and passage of the request, it will be done but the affected officials from the executive must also expedite action on the provision of the required information as regards documents authorising approval and disbursement of the money totaling N22.7 trillion," he said.

Nigeria exported cotton lint worth 29.9bn in 2022 – NACOTAN

By Philip Shimnom Clement

The President of the National Cotton Association of Nigeria, NACOTAN, Anibe Achimugu said the Nigeria textile sector is currently resuscitating as the value of exported cotton lint reached N29.9 billion ($64 million) as at November 2022.

He stated this yesterday at the 1st Nigeria International Cotton Summit and Expo 2023 in Abuja organised by the association in collaboration with the Federal Ministry of Industry,

Trade and Investment with the theme “Revamping the Cotton Value Chain.”

He decried that the golden age of cotton and textile was truncated after Nigeria had discovered oil, which led to the closure of the popular Kaduna textile and other textile factories across the country.

He however noted the various interventions of the federal government especially the CBN.

“The interventions of the CBN in the cotton and textile value chain are the reason why we are here today. These interventions have made it possible for us to increase production from 80,000 metric tons to 133,000 metric tons and also increase the number of factories in operation from seven to twenty-three.

Also, due to the impact of these interventions, our membership has increased from 67,000 in 2019 to 200,000 as of 2022 while the cotton value chain experienced an increase in export value from $31m in 2010 to $64m as at November 2022,” he said.

He added that the Executive Order 003 by President Muhammadu

Buhari mandating the military to patronise local textiles in producing their uniforms is also a contributing factor to the growth of the cotton and textile sector.

He urged the federal government to collaborate with the private sector and other relevant agencies in driving the sector forward.

Earlier in his remarks, the Minister of Industry, Trade and Investment, Otunba Richard Adebayo, noted that 24 states are currently producing cotton in Nigeria with Katsina State taking the lead.

FG showcases 250 technological products before investors

By Zakariyya Adaramola

About 250 locally made technological products which can generate hundreds of billions of naira for Nigeria have been presented to local and foreign investors by the federal government.

The technological products, all developed by Nigerian scientists at the Federal Institute for Industrial Research Oshodi (FIIRO), were presented on Tuesday during FIIRO Day at the ongoing Science, Technology and Innovation (STI) Expo taking place at the Eagle Square in Abuja.

“We have conducted cutting edge research on some raw materials readily available in Nigeria leading to the development of not less than 250 technologies, resulting in the creation of profitable enterprises which invariably has led to the generation of jobs through its multiplier effects, thereby reducing poverty and earning of foreign exchange”, the FIIRO Director General Dr Jummai Adamu said.

Jummai who presented the products said FIIRO had focused on Research & Development (R&D) activities that are market-driven, and demand-oriented and could move Nigeria from an import dependent to sustainable self-reliant and production for exports.

“We call on investors and other relevant partners to invest in our cutting edge R&D products, goods and services and also collaborate with us to support our dear nation to achieve its diversification agenda of moving from consumption to production economy through effective utilisation of Science, Technology and Innovation in the shortest possible period,” she added.

She said Nigeria’s mono-economy dependence on oil and gas, which is non-renewable, had kept the country away from meaningful development that would have made it respected among the comity of nations.

The DG listed some of the institute’s technological products including the Development and Production of High Nutrient Biscuits for School Age Children; the Development and Production of Ready-to-use Therapeutic Foods for the Management of Severe Acute Malnutrition (SAM); Nutraceuticals for the Management of Diseases such as Sickle Cell Anaemia-Research and Commercialisation; Development of Antilipemic/Hypolipidemic from Selected Fruits for the Management of Obesity; Utilisation of Neem Extracts for Production of Neem Skin Care/Oral Hygiene Products; and Development and Production of Fibre-Enriched Bread.

FG holds bidders’ conference for aerotropolis, cargo terminal

By Chris Agabi

The Ministry of Aviation has held a bidders’ conference for aerotropolis and cargo terminal development in the country.

The bidders’ conference held in Abuja is in line with the criteria in the Public Private Partnership (PPP) procurement phase.

The conference is in fulfillment of the provision of the Infrastructure Concession Regulatory Commission (ICRC) Act and National Policy on Public-Private-Partnership. Minister of Aviation,

Sen. Hadi Sirika, in his remarks said, “Government is committed to the projects and that is why it is taking time because of due diligence as ICRC superintended the process.”

He said as an entity regulating PPP, we follow their template so that members of the public get the value for the money.

“The present administration is not willing to sell public properties but willing to make them better, by giving them to the private sector to make them better so that there is value for the money,” he added.

Director of Planning, Research and Statistics, Muhammed Shehu, who doubles as chairman of Project Delivery Team (PDT) said the ministry is in the procurement phase for the selection of preferred bidders for the projects.

He said the conference is designed to interface with the companies/consortia that were successful at the Request for Qualification (RFQ) stage and have been re-qualified to proceed to the Request for Proposal stage of the procurement phase.

“The programme is to enable the companies to make clarifications with the consultant on the areas in the request for proposal package and draft contract agreement. The result of the exercise will guide them in the pupation of both technical and financial proposals,” he explained.

The Director of Transport Infrastructure (ICRC), Emmanuel Onwadi, said at this stage of the transaction, ICRC is willing and committed to making sure that we achieve the set standard in line with the aspiration of Nigerians.

MMA customs collects N69.77billion in a year

From Eugene Agha, Lagos

The Murtala Mohammed Airport Command of the Nigeria Customs Service, yesterday, said it collected N69.8 billion as revenue in 2022 compared to the N55.67bn that it generated in the same period in 2021.

Customs Area Controller, Sambo Dangeladima, made

this disclosure while presenting the command’s revenue profile for 2022.

He said: “I make bold to say that this area command never had it so good. This shows an overwhelming increase of N14.1billion representing 25.34%. The 2022 yearly target was N66.9 billion but the command surpassed the target with N2.83bn representing a 4.24% increase.”

FMBN, NLC others commission 100 housing units in Adamawa

By Amina Abdullahi, Yola

The Federal Mortgage Bank of Nigeria (FMBN), in collaboration with the Nigerian Labour Congress (NLC), Trade Union Congress (TUC), Nigerian Employers’ Consultative Association (NECA), and Almkab Dynamics Limited as implementing partner commissioned 100 housing units on Monday, at Shagari Low-cost in Yola.

Speaking at the occasion, the Managing Director of FMBN, Mr Madu Hamman, said the NHF is a mandatory contribution scheme that requires Nigerian workers in both public and private sectors earning a minimum of N3,000 per annum to contribute 2.5% of their monthly income to the scheme and based on regular contribution to the fund, a contributor becomes eligible to enjoy from FMBN several loans and service at concessionary interest rates which are repayable over a long tenor of over 25 years.

He explained that the commissioning is an affirmation that the NHF scheme is meeting its mandate of providing access to homeownership to the overriding majority of the middle and low-income working class in Nigeria who are also the commanding majority of the contributors to the NHF scheme.

He noted that FMBN has provided the construction funds for the development of the housing estate at a concession interest rate of 10%, and provides mortgage financing for the purchase of these houses to buyers at the rate of 6% which is also the lowest interest rate in Nigeria with a repayment period of over 25years.

He observed that under this phase, the bank is delivering 40 units of 3-bedroom semi-detached bungalows at N8.3 million and 36 units of 22-bedroom semi-detached bungalows at N6.8 million, and 24 units of 11-bedroom semi-detached bungalows at N3.1million.

'Some people using religion for economic, political agenda'

By Muideen Olaniyi

President Muhammadu Buhari says some people hide under the canopy of religion to advance their economic and political agenda.

He stated this yesterday at Nouakchott, Mauritania, while meeting with Rashad Hussain, United States Ambassador-at-Large for International Religious Freedom.

The president, according to a statement by his spokesman, Femi Adesina, said continuous education was needed so that the larger populace would not be hoodwinked.

Buhari, who narrated his private meeting at the White House with former President Donald Trump, recalled Trump asking him: "why're you killing Christians in Nigeria," and how he proceeded to tell him that the issue in the country was not religious, but rather criminal, and a usage of religion by some elements to further their economic, and sometimes, political interests.

"It's a problem Nigeria has been struggling with for a long time, and it's completely unnecessary," he said.

"Some people use religion as sentiment, but with adequate education, people are seeing through it now. Majority of the people just want to practise their religion without problem, but some people cash in on religious misunderstanding for their own ends.

"When people are educated, they're able to discern when others want to use religion for certain ends. They do it mostly for material reasons.

"Also, when some people are incompetent, they bring in all sorts of excuses, including religion," he added.

Ambassador Hussain said the US was interested in partnering with Nigeria in the areas of formal and non-formal education, towards religious harmony.

Why Nigeria is not getting it right—Aregbesola, Fayemi, Ahmed

By Abbas Jimoh

Former governors of Ekiti and Osun States, Kayode Fayemi and Rauf Aregbesola respectively and others yesterday identified poor national revenue generation, unemployment and poor implementation of campaign promises as factors inhibiting Nigeria's development.

They spoke in Abuja at one-day dialogue and 12th anniversary of an online media platform, Nigeria Politics Online (NPO) Reporters, with the theme: '2023 & Beyond: Tracking Campaign Promises for Good Governance'.

This is as the newspaper's publisher, Semiu Okanlawon, urged Nigerians to contribute meaningfully to national development.

Aregbesola, who is the Minister of Interior, said Nigeria's slow developmental pace over the years was due to the failure to adequately organise its local government structures.

He asked: "Why is Nigeria still having challenges? Is it because we have no revenue? A country of 200 million people, less than five percent are working and earning and you think there'll be progress?"

Fayemi, while speaking on why most governors and other political leaders fail to fulfil their campaign promises, said they are confronted with extenuating circumstances they cannot explain.

"Even when they can explain it, time elapses and they're not able to do it."

A former governor of Kwara State, Abdulfatah Ahmed, urged Nigerians not to get blown-away by sugar-coated campaign promises, but investigate the quality, capacity, mental alertness and suitability of the campaigner.

He said for campaign promises to be easily implemented, it must conform to the contents of the national and state budgets.

Nigeria must fabricate machines, tools for industrial devt— NASENI

By Seun Adeuyi

Executive Vice Chairman, National Agency for Science and Engineering Infrastructure (NASENI), Prof. Mohammed Haruna, yesterday said for a nation to develop industrially, it must be able to manufacture machines and tools.

He said this in Abuja at the signing of a Memorandum of Understanding between NASENI and the National Metallurgical Development Centre (NMDC), Jos.

He said the partnership would help equip industries in Nigeria with tools, machines and spare parts to enhance development.

"Processing metals and iron to produce tools and machines is a must. No nation can have industrial development if it cannot fabricate tools and machines.

"And it's not possible to do so until a nation appropriately develops and processes the God-given mineral resources. If we don't do this, we'll only continue to be importers of other people's products.

"For NASENI to partner with NMDC and all together to help us contribute our quarter to the revival and development of iron and steel industry in Nigeria, particularly our ambition to participate around some aspects of Ajaokuta Steel Company is a thing of joy and the beginning of transformation, which is the beginning of actually equipping the industries in Nigeria with tools, machines and spare parts.

"Most industries are not operational because they import everything," he said.

Director-General, NMDC, Prof. Linus Asuquo, said with the MOU, Nigeria would be on the right pedestal to compete favorably with the developed economies in the world.

Asuquo said NMDC was committed to the full implementation of the agreement.

NEDC offers 90 students N316m research grant

By Faruk Shuaibu

The North East Development Commission (NEDC) yesterday said 90 post graduate students would be offered a $700,000 (N316m) research grant to identify solutions to the recovery process of the North East.

The grant, which is under the commission's North East Recovery and Stability Program through the Multi-Sectoral Recovery Project, will engage six universities and one research institute in Borno, Yobe and Adamawa States

Speaking at a workshop for the flag-off of the event yesterday in Abuja, the federal coordinator of the programme Muhammad Danjuma, said the project was a $376m World Bank loan that the federal government took to resuscitate socio-economic activities in the three states and given as a grant to respond to their needs.

He said the grant would support research in five thematic areas of agriculture, climate change mitigation, regional planning, peace building and social cohesion.

1,342 gender-based cases disturbing— Malami

By John Chuks Azu

The Attorney-General of the Federation and Minister of Justice, Abubakar Malami, yesterday described the 1,342 cases of sexual and gender-based violence (SGBV) in Nigeria as disturbing phenomenon.

Malami spoke in Abuja at the opening of a two-day capacity building for judges on SGBV focusing on the use of practice direction and guidelines on the trial of sexual and gender-based violence and ancillary procedure.

He said the Federal Government had responded to the malaise by far-reaching policy, institutional and legislative measures such as the Violence Against Persons (Prohibition) Act of 2015 (VAPP), which has been adopted in 34 out of the 36 states of the country.

He said the government had also established the Inter-Ministerial Management Committee on the Eradication of SGBV, the SGBV response unit of the Ministry of Justice to facilitate access to justice for victims of SGBV-related offences and the Prosecution Hub consisting of selected investigators and prosecutor from relevant MDAs.

Earlier, Director-General, National Agency for the Prohibition of Trafficking in Persons, Fatima Waziri-Azi, had spoken about 1,342 SGBV cases involving spousal abuse, rape, physical injury, and abandonment.

Corruption not Nigerian thing — Osinbajo

From Peter Moses, Abeokuta

The vice president, Prof. Yemi Osinbajo, has said corruption is not a Nigerian thing as many tend to believe.

He also warned that Nigeria will “fail completely” if the leaders do not “accept and implement” what he described as an “ethical revolution.”

Osinbajo said these on Tuesday while delivering a lecture titled, ‘Values: The difference between success and Failure’, at the 100th anniversary of the Old Boys Association of the Baptist Boys’ High School, Abeokuta, Ogun State.

“Every modern society has had to deal with corruption. Corruption is not a Nigerian thing, sometimes we deceive ourselves. In fact, most countries of the world have been more corrupt than us, but their elites sat down and decided they have to deal with it because if they do not deal with it, it will deal with them,” he said.

Osinbajo called on educational institutions to inculcate the values of honesty, diligence, hard work, respect, trustworthiness, discipline and integrity in their students so as to raise youths with the right thinking.

He listed the late sage, Chief Obafemi Awolowo; MKO Abiola, former president Olusegun Obasanjo and Prince Bola Ajibola (SAN) - who were old students of the school as exceptional Nigerians who recorded great achievements in public service as a result of the training and values they got from the BBHS.

In his remarks, the national president of the old boys association, Prof. Kayode Oyesiku, listed some of the projects executed by the association in the school to include the mini stadium, an ultramodern and well-equipped library, an alumni hall, an art studio and a car park.

Gombe denies spending N4bn to fence govt house

From Haruna Gimba Yaya, Gombe

The Gombe State government has denied spending N4 billion to build a new fence to the Government House.

A stalwart of the New Nigeria Peoples Party (NNPP) while promoting the governorship candidate of his party, Khamisu Ahmed Mailantarki, on a local radio station had alleged that the Gombe Government House under construction gulped over N4 billion.

In a statement issued to newsmen yesterday, Ahmed Shuaibu Gara, Special Adviser on Strategy and Information Management to Governor Muhammadu Inuwa Yahaya, revealed that only the sum of N1.6 billion was expended in the last four years in the maintenance of all public buildings in the state.

“In 2019, the sum of N650

million was budgeted by the previous administration for the construction/renovation of public buildings which were inherited but only the sum of N125.8 million, representing 19 per cent of the budget, was spent.

“In 2020, the sum of N390 million was earmarked for the same purpose but N389.4 million representing 99 per cent was spent. Also in 2021, N700 million was budgeted and N409, 497, 859. 72 million was spent representing 58 per cent.

“While in 2022, N2.5 billion was budgeted out of which N691.8 million representing 27 per cent of the amount was spent. In total, the sum of N4.2 billion was budgeted for the construction and renovation of all public buildings in the last four years out of which the government was able to spend only N1.6 billion representing 38 per cent of the amount,” he explained.

Israel to start direct flights to Nigeria, promises supports

From Hamisu Kabir Matazu, who is in Jerusalem

Israeli government has said it will commence a direct flight operation from Israel to Nigeria in March to enhance trade and tourism between the two countries.

The Deputy Director-General, African Department, Sharon Bar-Li stated this while interacting with journalists at the Israeli Ministry of Foreign Affairs yesterday in Jerusalem.

Sharon noted that the route, expected to be very busy, would serve not only Nigerians but some neighbours in West Africa and Israelis.

On whether Israel as a destination of world agricultural innovations has any plan to help Nigeria to attain food security essential in areas ravaged by desert encroachment, Sharon said her country has so much to offer banking of her long range of experience.

In another development, Bar-Li said the State of Israel was committed to helping Nigeria build its economy through technological innovations and manpower development. She cited the establishment of the Israel Development Agency, MASHAV’s Innovative Hub (Innov-Hub) in Abuja for aspiring researchers as one area of intervention to developing countries in Africa.

She said the Innov-Hub is one of Israel’s sustainable development programmes in Africa that focus on entrepreneurship and innovation in different fields and sectors of the economy.

“This is to create cohorts of young entrepreneurs, and a network that can contribute to their economy, and their communities, with Israeli support.

“This is the direction we have been taking for several years in Africa, the MASHAV laboratory outside Abuja.

The deputy director general, Public Diplomacy at the Israeli Foreign Ministry, Emmanuel Nachshon, said unlike other countries in the world, the Israel model only helped countries to build their systems through partnership.

“What is unique about Israel is that we have no colonialist past, so it means we come with clean hands. These results are successful and they contribute to humanity,” he said.

Customs arrests 2, intercepts military hardware, drugs at Lagos airport

From Abdullateef Aliyu, Lagos

The Murtala Muhammed Area Command (MMAC) of the Nigeria Customs Service (NCS) has intercepted military and police hardware at the cargo section of the domestic wing of the Murtala Muhammed Airport (MMA), Lagos.

Also intercepted were hard drugs including 162 cartons of banned Tramadol hydrochloride 225 and 250mg.

The Customs Area Controller of the MMAC, Compt. Sambo Dangeladima, said the items were intercepted at the Skyway Aviation Handling Company

(SAHCO).

He gave the breakdown of the seized items to include 309 pieces of military helmets, 106 pieces of military armless jackets, 352 pieces of ballistic body armoured pads, 119 pieces of police badges, five pieces of bulletproof jackets, 33 pieces of body side ballistic pads and 105 pieces of ballistic chest plates.

He said a suspect, Olaolu Marquis, was arrested in connection with the seized military wares while another suspect, Samson Olayiwon Tantolohun, of 29 Okejide Street, Ejigbo, Lagos, was arrested in connection with the intercepted hard drugs.

How to tame corruption, bad governance — Oluwo

From Abiodun Alade, Lagos

Corruption will be reduced when traditional rulers are accorded authority to checkmate the activities of government officials and politicians.

This assertion was made in Lagos by the Oluwo of Iwo, Oba Abdulrasheed Akanbi, during the launch of his book titled, “Code of Kings,” to commemorate his 7th anniversary on the throne.

The monarch noted that good governance and accountability would be institutionalised when traditional rulers were involved in the management of the affairs of the country.

Oba Akanbi explained that the book set the standard for kings to represent custom and tradition, noting that “Kings are the representatives of God and they should not bow for any other thing.”

1 shot as police, traders clash in Lagos

One person on Tuesday sustained a gunshot wound in a clash between police and traders at Alaba Rago Market, in Ojo area of Lagos State.

The News Agency of Nigeria (NAN) gathered that the clash started after police officers from Okokomaiko Division stormed the market to effect the arrest of a suspect.

It was learnt that some traders obstructed the officers from carrying out their official duty.

The resistance eventually resulted in a clash in which one person was injured.

The spokesperson of the Lagos State Police Command, SP Benjamin Hundeyin, who confirmed the incident, said that the policemen shot in a bid to retreat from the attack.

“In a bid to tactically retreat from the armed mob attack, one of the officers fired his weapon, resulting in a fatal injury to one of the attackers.

“A detailed investigation has commenced into the immediate and remote causes of the incident,” he said.(NAN)

EXPLAINER

Electoral offences you should know and their penalties

By Hajara Hussaini

The Independent National Electoral Commission (INEC) has announced that there are 93.4 million registered voters in Nigeria.

The INEC chairman, Prof. Mahmoud Yakubu, noted that Lagos leads with 7,060,195 voters followed closely by Kano with 5,921,370 and Kaduna with 4,335,208.

However, by gender distribution, the number of male voters stands at 49,054,162, and females 44,414,846 with youths aged 18 to 34 making up the majority by age distribution with 37,060,399 voters registered.

Meanwhile, in promoting free and fair elections, the Constitution of the Federal Republic of Nigeria, 1999 as amended, and the Independent National Electoral Commission (INEC) Rules and Regulations constitute the legal framework that regulates electoral processes.

The provisions of these laws deal with the right to associate, vote, and form political parties. Others include registration of voters, Election Day procedures, and dispute resolution among others.

Violation of the provisions attracts a fine, imprisonment, or both.

However, this article highlights the offences and their penalties according to the Electoral Act 2022 that Nigerians should know.

Voter registration

There are various offences under this provision such as registering more than once, unlawful possession of a voter's card, selling or buying of a voter's card with a penalty of a fine not exceeding N100,000 or imprisonment for one year or both.

Also, giving false information in any application for registration as a voter attracts a fine of N500,000 or 12 months' imprisonment, or both.

Hindering another person from registering as a voter attracts a fine of N500,000 or five years in prison or both.

Lastly, impersonating a registration official, carrying out illegal registration or forgoing a registration card attracts a maximum fine of N1 million or 12 months in prison or both.

Offences in relation to ballot papers and ballot boxes

The Act states that unlawful possession of a ballot paper, illegal printing of ballot papers or illegal production or importation of ballot boxes attracts a maximum fine of N500,000 or a term of imprisonment of not less than 10 years or both.

Improper use of voter card

Any unlawful handing of a voter's card to some other person for use at an election other than an officer appointed to do so and being in possession of more than one voter's card attract a fine of N1,000,000 or imprisonment for 12 months or both.

Bribery and conspiracy (vote buying)

Vote buying is a norm in Nigeria. This happens when a voter accepts money, contract, or public office among others during or after an election in exchange for voting for a said political party, or abstaining from voting altogether.

Paying money to any other person for bribery at any election or receiving any money or gift for voting or refraining from voting at any election attracts a fine of N500,000 or 12 months' imprisonment or both.

Requirement of secrecy in voting

Party agents are fond of paying voters to cast their votes for their preferred candidate and asking them to display the ballot paper to ascertain they voted for the candidate they were paid to vote.

The act also states that not maintaining the secrecy of voting at a polling unit or interfering with a voter casting his vote attracts a fine of N100,000 or imprisonment for a term of six months or both.

Wrongful voting and false statements

The Electoral Act further states that anyone found guilty of illegal voting or publishing any statement of the withdrawal of a candidate or about his personal character shall be fined a maximum of N100,000 or six months in prison, or both.

Voting by unregistered persons

Every person willing and qualified to vote in an election is expected to register with the Independent National Electoral Commission and get a Permanent Voters Card (PVC).

According to Part VII, No. 124 of the act, bringing a voter's card issued to another person during an election, the offender shall be fined N100,000, a term of six months in prison, or both.

Disorderly conduct at elections

Disorderliness, such as inciting others to act in a disorderly manner which is common in Nigeria, shall be fined N500,000 or imprisonment for a term of 12 months or both.

Furthermore, soliciting for votes, persuading any voter not to vote for a particular candidate or being in possession of any offensive weapon or using any vehicle bearing the colour or symbol of a political party or loitering around a polling unit blaring siren shall attract a fine of N100,000 or six months' imprisonment of both.

Undue influence

Undue influence means accepting money or any other inducement during an election, and the penalty is a fine of N100,000 or imprisonment for a term of 12 months or both.

Threatening

The act states that threatening a person with violence, or injury to compel that person to vote or refrain from voting or preventing any political aspirant from free use of the media vehicles, mobilisation of political support and campaign at an election shall attract a fine of N1,000,000 or three years imprisonment.

Offences in respect of nomination

Here, the Act states that forging a nomination paper or result form, willfully defacing or destroying a nomination paper or result form, delivering to an electoral officer a forged nomination paper or result form, signing a nomination paper or result form as a candidate in more than one constituency at the same election attracts a maximum term of two years in prison on conviction.

Dereliction of duty and false result

Under this, the Electoral Act states that a polling officer failing to report on time or to discharge his duties on an election day without a lawful excuse shall be punished on conviction to a maximum fine of N500,000 or 12 months imprisonment, or both.

Also, announcing or publishing a false election result shall attract 36 months' imprisonment.

Snatching or destruction of election materials

Snatching or destruction of election materials or devices by any individual is an offence under the Electoral Act and Part VII No. 126 of the act notes that offenders shall be imprisoned for 24 months.

Lobi Stars poised to pounce on embattled Rangers

By David Ngobua

Inspired by their performance in the season opener against champions, Rivers United, Lobi Stars are poised to take the maximum points against Rangers in their rescheduled Week One match billed for today at the New Township stadium in Jos.

While 10-man Lobi Stars lost gallantly to defending champions last Sunday, Enugu Rangers suffered a shocking 0-2 loss to Abia Warriors in the 'Oriental derby' in Awka, Anambra state.

Therefore, the Week Two fixture is a must win for both sides who are eagerly looking for their first points in the 2023 Nigeria Professional Football League (NPFL) abridged season.

Technical Adviser, Coach Mohammed BabaGanaru and scorer of Lobi Stars' lone goal in Port-Harcourt, Abba Umar, are optimistic of victory over Rangers.

Speaking to the Club's Media, Ganaru said "I am impressed with the performance of the players at Rivers United. It is an indication that with the right approach we can subdue Rangers on Wednesday (today)".

Imposing striker and former Katsina United star, Abba Umar, who scored his first league goal Lobi Stars also believes he can continue with his present form.

"I thank Almighty God for giving me the grace to score against the defending champions. We were unlucky in Port-Harcourt but I am optimistic of a better performance against Rangers," he said.

Quadri seeks redemption as 2023 WTT Contender Doha serves off

From Dotun Omisakin, Lagos

After finishing in the quarter-finals at the WTT Contender Durban in South Africa last week, African table tennis champion, Quadri Aruna, will resume action today as he seeks to redeem his image when takes on Portuguese star Marcos Freitas in the first round of the WTT Contender Doha 2023 in Qatar.

Freitas has been listed as the number two seed in the men's singles behind Brazil's Hugo Calderano- winner of the WTT

Contender Durban.

The reigning African champion will have to be at his best against his familiar opponent who won their last meeting in 2018.

Quadri who remains the highest ranked African in the world following the release of the ITTF ranking on Monday is still rated 14th which was his rank at the beginning of the year 2023.

Sharing his experience at the just concluded WTT Contender in Durban, he described the tourney as a good start for him following his exit from the German league to the Russian league.

He added that the ongoing championship would boost his confidence heading into the lucrative European league debut later this month in Russian.

"I think my performance was impressive because I gave my all in Durban and the two matches I played were not that easy, especially the round of 16 against the French teenager Felix Lebrun who has been beating some of the top players in the world. The wins have boosted my confidence going to Russian for my league debut.

"I look forward to another good performance in Doha but I must admit that there is no easy match again because everybody is at the same level regardless of the world ranking," he said.

Quadri who was a semi-finalist at the Star Contender Doha 2022 believes the quality of players in Doha attested to what to expect when the main draw begins at the Lusail Sports Arena as a total prize pool of $75,000 and 400 World Ranking points at the top for the winners will be up for grabs.

There is serious depth in Doha with Contender Muscat II 2022 winner South Korea's Jang Woojin and Star Contender Doha 2022 winner Andrej Gacina of Croatia will also be in the mix.

Yarma urges Doma United to remain focused despite shaky start

By David Ngobua

The former Chairman of Gombe State Sports Commission, Malam Farouk Yarma, has charged Nigeria Premier Football League (NPFL) debutants, Doma United, to stay focused despite the home draw in their opening match of the 2023 NPFL season.

One of the two privately owned clubs in the Nigerian topflight, Doma United were forced to a 1-1 draw last Sunday by Sunshine Stars in the Week One match played at the Pantami stadium in Gombe.

Charles Chibuke scored Doma United's first goal in the NPFL in the 38th minute but Sunshine Stars' Ibrahim Yusuf equalised at the death for a share of the spoils.

A mammoth crowd had thronged the Pantami stadium to watch how Doma United would make history by winning their first match in the NPFL but that didn't happen.

However, Yarma who served as Commissioner for Youth Empowerment in Gombe State said Doma United and their teeming fans should be proud of what they were able to achieve against the more illustrious Sunshine Stars.

According to him, the league is a marathon so true fans of Doma United should remain resolute in their support for the club.

"I understand how you feel after drawing your first match in the Premier League at home to Sunshine Stars.

"I want to urge you to remain resolute. The league season has just started. You have a good team so if you stay focused, you will surely go places.

"To the fans, maintain your support. No team can excel without the backing of the supporters. Your support matters a lot to the success of the club," said Yarma.

Ronaldo-Messi rivalry set for new chapter in Riyadh

A new chapter in the celebrated rivalry between Cristiano Ronaldo and Lionel Messi will unfurl on Thursday when they meet in an exhibition match as the Portugal forward gears up for his first game in Saudi Arabia since joining Al Nassr.

After a glittering career in Europe that saw him win four Champions League titles with Real Madrid and two Scudettos at Juventus, Ronaldo signed for Al Nassr, describing it as the "right moment" to share his experience in Asia.

The Saudi club is the latest stop in Ronaldo's career that began in 2002 at Sporting CP before the forward spent two spells at Manchester United, the last of which ended on a bitter note as he exited following his acrimonious split with the club.

Ronaldo and Messi, who have dominated football's debate about the greatest of all time (GOAT) for the best part of 10 years, will face off on the pitch on Thursday for the first time since December 2020 when Juventus beat Barcelona 3-0.

Ronaldo will lead Riyadh ST XI, a team made up of players from Al Hilal and Al Nassr, against Messi's Paris St Germain in the exhibition contest where nothing is at stake, but fans are still excited by the prospect of watching the two stars clash.

The highly anticipated showdown, which will take place at the King Fahd Stadium in Riyadh, reportedly had more than two million online ticket requests.

The bidding for a VIP "Beyond Imagination" ticket to the match has already topped 10 million riyals ($2.66 million) in an auction that is set to end later on Tuesday.

INEOS confirms entering bidding process to buy Man United

■ Jim Ratcliffe

Jim Ratcliffe's company INEOS has formally entered the bidding process to buy Premier League soccer club Manchester United, a spokesperson for the chemical firm said on Tuesday.

The Glazer family, United's US owners, said in November they had begun looking at options for the 20-times English champions, including new investment or a potential sale, 17 years after they bought the Old Trafford club.

In August, British billionaire Ratcliffe, a long-time fan of the club, expressed interest in buying United, Reuters reported.

"I can confirm that we have formally put ourselves into the process," an INEOS spokesperson said

Djokovic feels the love during dominant opening victory

■ Novak Djokovic

Novak Djokovic soaked up thunderous applause in his first match back at the Australian Open after last year's deportation drama, as the nine-times champion outclassed Roberto Carballes Baena 6-3 6-4 6-0 on Tuesday in a flawless start to his title bid.

Returning to Melbourne Park where the prolific Serbian was denied a title defence in 2022 after being sent home amid public fury for not having a Covid-19 vaccination, Djokovic saved three early break points to win the first set as fans sang his name.

"I felt very welcome on the court, especially the Serbian community that is big here in Australia has welcomed me in an incredible way. So much support. So much love," Djokovic told reporters.

Emefiele: Lost but found

It's difficult to dismiss the stories around the disappearance and reappearance of the CBN Governor, Godwin Emefiele, as just another spark from our hyperactive rumour mill. The Department of State Services had, in December 2022, filed a suit at the Federal High Court Abuja for authorisation to arrest him over wild allegations of terrorism financing and economic crimes. These were frightening charges, especially because the accused had had the ears of the president and had, thus, seemed to have enjoyed immunity to perceived witch-hunts.

In rejecting the application, the court pointed out that the DSS, in a clever move, failed to disclose Emefiele's status or office in the application or the affidavit, compelling them to speculate whether it's the CBN governor or a namesake, and then noted what's in the mind of every Nigerian bystander: "an application of this kind should have evidence of the approval of the respondent's boss, that such measures are authorised to be taken".

That the president's authorisation wasn't sought suggested that the DSS were after an interest other than that of the president, and whether theirs is the best for the nation is yet to be established. The Chief Judge of the Federal High Court Abuja, Justice John Tsoho, could see through the charade, that the court was being tricked into enabling and legitimising chaos. With or without a court order, the presiding judge said in his December 9, 2022 ruling, the DSS had the power to arrest Mr Emefiele if they had reasonable suspicion to do so, and that their resolve to seek the court's arrest warrant to serve as a cover for an unusual and ambiguous procedure must be for lack of concrete evidence.

Mr Emefiele went off the radar since then, deepening the climate of suspicion, and rumoured to have been on the run by the curious nation. For an institution that's announced a critical monetary policy, the naira redesign, and promised to enforce it, the report that the man in charge of such controversy is missing stirred up certain feelings of foreboding. It also signals the return of familiar dabbling in a state matter. Such policing showmanship isn't only needless, it could've been easily handled by either the presidency or the legislature.

Mr Emefiele's predecessor, Sanusi Lamido Sanusi, also became a target of the DSS after alerting that $20 billion from the nation's oil earnings was missing from the state's coffers in 2014. The whistleblowing misadventure led to Mr Sanusi's removal from office and, having had enough of the state-authorized harassment, he filed a suit to seek restraint from the police and the DSS from arresting, detaining or otherwise harassing him. In a counter-affidavit, the DSS filed in response to Mr Sanusi's lawsuit, they accused him of terror financing, and cited that as the reason for impounding his international passport.

Unlike Mr Sanusi who was at war with then President Goodluck Jonathan, the current CBN Governor doesn't seem to have had a fallout with the president. When Mr Emefiele's controversial Naira redesign policy was under attack, and opposed by the outraged public and the National Assembly, he found the support he desired from the president—and that quelled the antagonistic reactions to his policy.

But the true proof of Mr Emefiele's grace has to be his curious presidential aspiration. Venturing into politics in a fashion that alarmed the country while still occupying a sensitive high office could have only been with the blessings of the president, and that compromising ambition at the height of disastrous monetary policies reassured us of his place in Buhari's government.

Mr Emefiele came out of his hiding this week, the reports of his return have been contradicting. Reacting to the viral stories that DSS operatives had invaded the CBN headquarters to round up Mr Emefiele on Monday, the DSS spokesman, Peter Afunanya, dismissed

But there seems to be another explanation, probably another spark from our rumour mill, as the reason the DSS couldn't arrest Emefiele. The twist is alarming, and the most dangerous in this saga so far. Heads of the armed forces, according to reports, are out to stop the DSS from barking at the CBN governor. On January 17, the Daily Sun reported that the approval for the private jet that brought Mr Emefiele back to the country was secured by service chiefs, the "false news making the rounds that its operatives invaded the Central Bank of Nigeria and arrested its governor" as "fake news and quite misleading."

But there seems to be another explanation, probably another spark from our rumour mill, as the reason the DSS couldn't arrest Emefiele. The twist is alarming, and the most dangerous in this saga so far. Heads of the armed forces, according to reports, are out to stop the DSS from barking at the CBN governor. On January 17, the Daily Sun reported that the approval for the private jet that brought Mr Emefiele back to the country was secured by service chiefs, adding that "military men had been positioned... at the private wing of the Murtala Muhammed International Airport, Lagos," which prevented any move by the DSS to attempt arresting the CBN governor."

However far we intend to write and dispense these stories, the most significant reality is that Emefiele has been found, and the first case before him at the court is, surprisingly, not from the DSS. "A Federal High Court in Abuja has summoned Governor of the Central Bank of Nigeria (CBN), Godwin Emefiele, to appear on Wednesday over a $53 million judgment debt arising from the Paris Club refunds," Daily Trust reported on Tuesday, and that "The suit arose over an alleged $70 million judgment against Linas over the lawyer's services in the Paris Club refund, which Emefiele was said to have released only $17 million, leaving an outstanding $53 million."

So, whether Emefiele's return is from hiding, or annual leave as the apex bank's spokesman announced to dispel the wild rumours and unexplained events, is immaterial. The bigger question now is, based on the allegations levelled against him and the brewing inter-agency war and the fact that there's still a duly-elected president to whom all parties in the drama report, what next?
