NEWS COVERAGE

I HAVE for long observed that most incidents in this country, no matter their locality, are first broadcast on foreign Radio stations and in full details before our local broadcasting houses. Even then, it is only in bits that we hear of it. One of these typical foreign Radio Houses is the BBC in London.

What can be the cause of this? Is it that foreign news correspondents in Nigeria are more numerous and efficient than ours?

I do hope the FRCN will do something serious about this since I consider it a shameful thing to have to depend on foreign media houses for news about events in Nigeria.

I have observed that all the music slots on the programmes of Radio Nigeria Ikeja are dominated by Fuji music. While appreciating the fact that we should promote our local music industry, I also want to point out that Fuji is not the only Nigerian music. In this regard, Radio Nigeria Ikeja should not limit its choices to Fuji. Other brands of local music like calypso, highlife and apala should also be included.

COVER

We thought it most befitting to grace this month's Cover of the Radio/TV Times with the arresting photograph of Mrs. Adenike Adebanwo. The rare bird we have netted for you is an Internal Auditor with the FRCN, Lagos. Nike chooses to perceive the world from behind a flashy pair of glasses. But that still does not eclipse her glittering eyes. And with that broad smile that dimples her cheeks, Nike could only be wishing you a happy Easter celebration. So happy Easter to all our readers — and to Nike too, of course!

Programme Highlight

FOR the second quarter of this year, spanning from April to June, your two favourite programmes - FOR CHILDREN and LET'S FIND OUT - will, as usual, be full of niceties. Very entertaining and educative programmes have been planned on a wide variety of subjects to meet your tastes and interests.

FOR CHILDREN

Let's take a look at 'FOR CHILDREN'. There will be plenty of Drama, Debates and Discussions. Quiz, Songs and Poems will also be part of this very exciting package which you cannot afford to miss.

Here's a small sample: Suppose, on Good Friday, the day Jesus was crucified, suppose you were His younger brother or sister. What would you have done when you saw him dragged into judgement, mocked, flogged and later crucified? Would you have wept or fought for him? Or would you have offered to die with him? I bet you've never thought of that! You're sure to hear that topic discussed during the Easter period.

Who do you think your village needs more - the doctor or the farmer? What do you know about the origins and importance of Nigerian Children's Day Celebrations? These are among the many important questions which the programme will attempt to answer. Here are other samples. Do you know the advantages of friendship? Where do you think it is safer to live - in the town or village? I'm sure you have your views on those issues, but it will be quite revealing and entertaining to hear the opinions of other children.

Some adults are of the opinion that Nigeria needs discipline more than she needs academic knowledge, especially discipline among the youths. Others say that today's children do not show enough respect for their elders. Maybe you don't agree with them, or maybe you do. But some of our programmes this quarter will bring you the opinions of other children on these issues.

A word of caution here. It may not be possible for you to listen to any of these 'goodies' if you should fall sick. So, why don't you pay particular attention to a doctor's talk on "Good Habits for Good Health?" It will be on the air on World Health Day - April the 7th 1983.

LET'S FIND OUT

"For Children" is not the only programme you need to listen to though. Do you know about "LET'S FIND OUT"? As its name implies, this programme helps children and young people to broaden their knowledge of the world around them. It either takes you to various important places to bring you eye-witness accounts of what goes on there, or it brings you the views and opinions of important, knowledgeable people on issues that are of interest to you.

For instance, how much of Nigeria - your own country - do you know? I bet that, outside your home state, you know very little about the country

Kiddies on the play ground. Nigeria owes her children a healthy education for the development of sound minds.

KNOW YOUR COUNTRY

That's why this quarter, in continuation of our series 'KNOW YOUR COUNTRY', 'Let's Find Out' will take you on a tour of Ogun, Sokoto, Rivers, Kaduna, Ondo and Borno States. You will find out how the people live, the kinds of work they do, their languages and the kinds of music they enjoy. You will also find out what the states look like, and what they produce.

Haven't you sometimes wished you knew a little more about some words which are in very common use? Like the word "Insurance" for instance. What does it mean? What is it all about? You will have all the information you need on this subject in "Let's Find Out".

When was the Christian festival of Easter first celebrated, and where? What really is the importance of this festival? You will find answers to these questions in the Easter period.

Among the many important places or establishments you will 'visit' on the programme are a Paper Mill (to find out how paper is made and what materials are used); a sea-port complex (to find out how ships are received, off-loaded, loaded and sent out again). You will also 'visit' a Motor Car Assembly Plant - to observe what bits and pieces go into the making of a motor car.

To hear these and all the other wonderful things, all you need to do is tune in to Radio Nigeria Lagos every Monday and Wednesday at 2.45 p.m. for 'Let's Find Out'. 'For Children' can be heard every Thursday at 2.45 p.m. and every Saturday at 10.45a.m.

SUNNY OGIDI,
PRODUCER

'Let's Find Out' on Radio Nigeria Lagos will take the kids on a trip to a car assembly plant and other interesting places.

Independence Essay Competition 1983

Crime has lived with us for as long as we began to distinguish between good and evil. Crime is an offence for which there is severe punishment by law. But in spite of the law, crime is committed in various ways and at various levels. The consequences to our society today are of such magnitude that serious steps should be taken to check the evil, at least to allow for peace necessary for our national progress.

For various reasons, people commit crime, and some sociologists strongly believe that POVERTY is one of the main causes. Whether this is true or not, is an issue we wish to raise for deliberation in this year's Independence Essay Competition. Radio Nigeria therefore invites you to take part in the competition.

The topic: "Is Poverty the Cause of Crime in the Country?"

Your essay, which must be typed, should contain between 1,800 and 2,000 words. It should reach the Principal Producer, Talks Section, Radio Nigeria, Ikoyi - Lagos not later than 31st July, 1983. Entries open on the 1st of April, 1983.

The three most outstanding essays will win cash prizes of N150.00, N100.00, and N60.00

Send your entry form the 2nd of April, 1983.

OPEN UNIVERSITY SYSTEM

A Chance For More Nigerians To Qualify

By Aliu Idris

WELL-MEANING Nigerians have continued to air their views on the vexed question of an Open University for Nigeria. The whole principle was quite popular among members of the National Assembly. The speed with which the House of Representatives dealt with the bill on Open University justified that assumption.

That the Senate would equally deal with the issue with dispatch was a fore-gone conclusion. The general feeling was that the bill was already home.

The Senators turned a cold shoulder to it. Of course, they advanced several reasons for their action, many of them convincing in a way.

The senate action has provided a oasis for a nation-wide debate on whether or not this country should have an open university.

Chief Denis Osadebay, Premier of the former Mid-Western Region and the Pro-Chancellor of Lagos University has spoken at length on the question of an open university for Nigeria. It is his view that such a university provides an elastic opportunity of higher education for many qualified Nigerian who now cannot survive the cut-throat competition to gain admission to the conventional universities. He further said that Nigeria is ready now for an Open University since she is at this time involved in finding ways and means of upgrading her manpower.

On the other hand, the few people that have spoken against the plan to establish the Open University have based their arguments mainly on the problems of public utilities. But the problems of such public utilities like NEPA, P and T and the mass Media are being blown out of proportion.

Nigerians need to move away from the periphery of negative criticism to the centre of concrete proposals if we are to successfully launch into an enviable and fundamental educational future.

By adapting the resources and materials available within the country and modifying the system to suit the socio-economic circumstances of the nation, the Open University of Nigeria is bound to succeed. As rightly expressed by Chief Osadebay, its academic standards will not only be guaranteed but also comparable to those of existing conventional universities since these will be determined by the Professors who take part in the programme.

Benefits that will accrue from an Open University system are immense, as can be inferred from the nature of the Institution. The system is sure to promote an enlightened, informed and literate citizenry. It will uplift the workers and ordinary Nigerians through its emphasis on grassroots education.

The Open University is a low-cost institution. Conversely it costs a lot of money to go through a conventional university and not every qualified candidate has that much money. The Open University will give those who are constrained to work while they study a chance of a life-time.

By establishing the Open University now, the country will be taking practical steps towards ensuring the conservation of its foreign exchange since many knowledge thirsty Nigerians who have to go abroad in quest of higher learning will take advantage of the system based in their own country.

It cannot be over-emphasized that the Open University will be the apex of mass education in Nigeria. For this and other reasons, all hands must be on deck to ensure that the Open University of Nigeria becomes a vibrant aspect of our educational life.

Graduands at a convocation ceremony An Open University will ease the competition for places in the Conventional universities.

NIGERIA-INDIA TIES

THERE are a number of factors that made the Nigeria-India dialogue in New Delhi very significant. One was that it was the first time a Nigerian Head of State or President paid a State Visit to India.

Nigeria's relation with India dates back to pre-independence with the involvement of many Indian nationals in Nigeria's business sector. This continued into the post independence era, until the indigenisation act stipulated areas of restriction affecting participation or sole ownership of certain enterprises of foreigners.

That brought about the desired diversification and the venture into the production sector with the establishment of industries involving part or sole participation by Indian entrepreneurs. Apart from the private sector, Indian nationals under a technical exchange accord existing between Nigeria and India have been largely employed both by the Federal and State Governments in educational and Medical Institutions.

Most of them have distinguished themselves in the various fields and have demonstrated strong commitment to Nigeria's development effort, in industry and agricultural sector as well as water resources exploitation.

It was in realisation of the healthy climate already established the consolidation of the existing relations and the promotion of further areas of co-operation that President Shehu Shagari undertook the trip to India. The state visit had been postponed last year and in an effort to forge a greater understanding, a second postponement would have created doubts as to Nigeria's sincerity of purpose.

It was therefore to the actual benefit of the two countries that the President had to honour the invitation and keep his date with Indian leaders on their soil. Because of the influential positions the two countries occupy in their continents, the promotion of Nigeria's relation with India is considered vital to the overall interest of the third world and the non-aligned movement.

In addition to their immediate bilateral areas of co-operation, Nigeria and India have shared common stands in many international organisations to which both belong. Among them are the commonwealth, non-aligned movement, and group of seventy-seven.

It was natural for this level of understanding and co-operation to be reflected in the communique which emerged after the talks in New Delhi. It ranged from the situation in south Africa, the Namibian question, the Gulf war, the situation in Afghanistan, south east Asia and the Middle East. The two countries strongly condemned arms build-up and super-power collaboration for escalation of tension and conflict.

On the world economic situation, Nigeria and India, regretted the lack of progress in north-south relations and the deterioration in the climate of multi-lateral economic co-operation. The two sides stated that all efforts should be made to reach agreement concerning the early launching of Global negotiations and for their expeditious conclusion. It was their hope that greater efforts should be made to achieve progress in areas of critical importance to developing countries such as food, energy, finance, industrialisation, and trade.

One area of concern that could bring about a realistic change to the course of the world economic situation was the identification of the lack of adequate cooperation among members of the south. Charity, they say begins at home and that was why the call by the leaders of Nigeria and India for the intensification of dialogue with the South seems a positive step in the right direction.

It is rightly noted that economic co-operation among developing countries was not acquiring the desired significance and effectiveness. This emphasises the need for the developing countries to work out a charter of action for the development of their full potentials, towards achieving collective self-reliance and reduce their vulnerability to pressures from the north.

This is necessary because it is only when the south is strong, that its bargaining position with the north could be enhanced and defended. The situation can only attain a new dimension, with the north being forced to accept that there was something to negotiate about.

Nigeria and India have set a worthy example in the south-south co-operation with the signing of a trade agreement and their resolve to provide effective machinery for the success of their already existing Indo-Nigeria Joint Commission. In addition, a protocol on collaboration in matters of Research was signed, while the instrument of ratification of the cultural agreement between the two countries was exchanged.

These represent the immediate and long-term products of the dialogue between Nigeria and India at the Summit level in New Delhi.

Mrs. Indira Gandhi, Indian Prime Minister.

Alhaji Shehu Shagari, Nigeria's Executive President.

OCTOBER LECTURES

"Water and Sanitation In Nigeria"

RIVER BASIN AUTHORITIES

Role They Play In Development

LECTURE five in our series on October Lectures features the activities of the eleven River Basin Development Authorities. It dwells on the crucial role the Authorities are playing as the major tool for achieving the goals of the Green Revolution. Among other things, the Authorities undertake land clearing for large scale mechanised farming, provision of water for irrigation and high-yielding seed, livestock and loans for farmers.

THE River Basin Development Authorities were established to ensure that a nationwide, systematic and irreversible progressive development of water resources is achieved. They were also envisaged to be tools for stabilizing rural-urban migration.

I will now attempt to discuss some of the immediate antecedents leading to the formation of River Basin Development Authorities and the purpose and functions they were conceived and empowered to fulfil. I will also evaluate their past and present activities in order to assess their achievements and prospects for future development.

The Federal Republic of Nigeria covers a land area of approximately 9,000,000 square kilometers and situated entirely in the tropical West African sub-region. The climate is semi-arid to the North but gradually becoming humid to the South.

It is generally true to say that mean daily annual temperature is higher in the North than in the South; that mean daily relative humidity and annual rainfall are lower in the North than in the South but mean daily sunshine period in the North is longer than in the South.

The Nigerian economy has grown rapidly since 1970 mainly as a result of the rise in oil exports; in spite of this, the economy is predominantly based on agriculture with a bulk of the population employed in Agriculture and related activities.

Nigeria is fortunate in that it is well drained with a reasonable network of Rivers and streams. Large reservoirs in underground aquifers also abound. However, most of the rivers in the North are seasonal; while those in the South are largely perennial.

Until recently the approach to water resources development and management in Nigeria except for few isolated cases, has been very passive. Emphasis was placed on the provision of drinking water only, and even here, the quality so provided has been in some cases, very poor and the quantity inadequate.

The Sahelian drought in the North and the perennial, sometimes persistent flooding and erosion in the South highlighted the need and the urgency for the development of water resources in Nigeria. The provision of water from reservoirs, wells and boreholes for the urban and rural water supply schemes as well as for irrigated agriculture is another motive for water resources development.

The concept of River Basin Development dates back to 1961 with the establishment of the Niger River Delta Development Board which played an advisory role in the physical development of the Niger Delta.

However, actual development of water resources only began with studies of the Niger River for navigational purposes and construction of Kainji Dam for hydropower. Co-ordinated water resources development started in 1973 with the creation of the Sokoto Rima and Chad Basin Development Authorities. This was followed in 1976 with the creation of the other eight River Basin Development Authorities making a total of the existing eleven River Basin Authorities.

The Development Authorities were consolidated by the River Basin Development Authorities Act of 1979 and they are:

1. The Sokoto - Rima;
2. The Hadejia - Jama'are;
3. The Chad;
4. The Upper Benue.
5. The Lower Benue;
6. The Cross River;
7. The Anambra-Imo
8. The Niger Delta
9. Benin-Owena
10. The Ogun-Osun
11. The Niger River Basin Development Authorities.

The River Basin Development Authorities are so spatially distributed that the entire country is covered and in most cases the boundary of the basins corresponds to the hydrographical boundary of principal rivers in the area. The net result is that the areas of most of the River Basin Development Authorities do not correspond to political boundaries. For example, the Sokoto-Rima River Basin Development Authority covers the entire Sokoto state as well as the Katsina Emirate of Kaduna State, while Ogun-Osun River Basin Development Authority is the whole of Oyo, Ogun and Lagos States.

The purpose of the River Basin Development Authorities is principally water resources development for multi-sectorial uses. This includes the comprehensive development of both surface and underground water resources for multipurpose use; the development of schemes for the control of floods and erosion, and for water-shed management, including afforestation.

Others are the construction and maintenance of large and small dams, polders, wells, boreholes, irrigation and drainage systems and other works necessary for the achievement of the Authority's functions; the provision of water from reservoirs and lakes under the control of the Authority for irrigation purposes for farmers and rebornized associations as well for urban and rural water supply schemes.

River Basin Development Authorities are also empowered to control pollution in rivers, lakes, lagoons and creeks; resettle persons affected by their works and schemes or under special resettlement schemes, develop fisheries and improve navigation on the rivers, lakes, reservoirs, lagoons and creeks; under-take the mechanised clearing and cultivation of land for the production of crops and livestock, and for forestry in areas both inside and outside irrigation projects;

They promote the large scale multiplication of improved seeds, livestock and tree seedlings for distribution to farmers, they process crops, livestock products and fish produced by farmers in the Authority's area in partnership with State Agencies and any other persons; assist the state and local governments in the implementation and funding of rural development work. They are also empowered to engage in the provision of power for rural water supply schemes and to construct feeder roads for the evacuation of farm produce.

They could provide power for rural electrification schemes from suitable irrigation dams and other types of power stations under their control. They are empowered to establish agro-service centres and grazing-centres and finally they must ensure the manpower development for the running and maintenance of all their schemes. It is clear from all these that the functions of the River Basin Development

Rice-farming

Authorities are multidisciplinary and diversified.

The focus on the River Basin Development Authorities as a vehicle for the efficient achievement of the Green Revolution is as a result of the heightened food crisis which occurred in this country in the middle of the 3rd National Development Plan Period (1975-1980), and the emphasis on the activities of these Basin Development Authorities has since therefore been that of irrigated agriculture as well as water supply schemes using the water released from reservoirs created behind dams.

In some cases, however, water is lifted directly from rivers and lakes to irrigate large expanses of land as it is the case in the Shonga Rice Irrigation Scheme and the South Chad Irrigation Project respectively. The current level of activities of the River Basin Development Authorities is largely determined among other factors by the age of the Authority and the number of on-going projects inherited by it.

While the older River Basin Development Authorities like the Sokoto-Rima, the Hadejia-Jama'are and the Chad Basin Development Authorities are relatively quite advanced in the achievements of Water Resources Development Schemes, the younger River Basin Development Authorities like Anambra-Imo, Benin-Owena and the Lower Benue River Basin Development Authorities are just beginning to emerge. The Ogun-Oshun, Upper Benue and the Niger River Basin Development Authorities deserve special mention because of their dynamism and impressive achievements to date.

The eleven River Basin Development Authorities will put about 250,000 ha under irrigation during the 1981-85 Plan Period. By the end of 1982, it is expected that the River Basin Development Authorities will cultivate 155,000 ha out of which 60,000 ha will be irrigated, and it is hoped that the total projected area of 250,000 ha will be under irrigation before the end of the current Plan Period.

The River Basin Development Authorities also assist farmers outside their Agricultural perimeters by the provision of tractors, improved seeds and seedlings and assistance in land clearing. This assistance, to date, covers an additional area of about 185,000 ha. More than 45% of the programmes of the River Basin Development Authorities is committed to boosting rice production and the expected yield in 1982 was estimated at 131,000 metric tonnes. In addition the farmer-assisted programmes will contribute another 90,000 metric tonnes. Other anticipated productions are: Maize; 64,000 tonnes and Cassava; 10,000 tonnes.

The Niger Delta Basin Development Authority is expected to cultivate oil-palm over an estate of 250 ha. And finally, one should not forget the efforts of all the River Basin Development Authorities in fisheries and livestock productions. All these are yet the beginning, more so that about 32 million hectares are cultivable in Nigeria.

The Federal Government is however committed to the accelerated provision of water for agriculture and domestic use and the development authorities which directly undertake these activities for the benefit of farmers and the entire population are being given the necessary facilities to achieve the objectives.

For the consideration of the strategies for development, it must be mentioned that most of the Authorities inherited some on-going projects and feasibility studies of a number of isolated and scattered projects. This has resulted in schemes that do not necessarily follow a masterplan approach to rational Basin Development in the area where they have jurisdiction. The River Basin Development Authorities have also embarked on a good number of projects conceived by them since their inception.

Unfortunately the lack of adequate manpower within the Authorities has forced them to engage the services of consultants and contractors to execute their projects, the result of which is high cost of these projects. Also serious lack of essential data on topography, soil and water resources potential have also hampered desirable progress.

Some of the River Development Authorities have embarked, by self effort, on small irrigation trials through impounding water in small reservoirs with integrated approach of crop production and livestock. This approach has made considerable impact both in cost and speed of achievement.

From the price survey on representative unit costs for irrigation development recently carried out, it appears that land clearing, crop compensation and unit construction costs are cheaper in the North than in the South. Today irrigation development as a whole is more extensive in the North, but this is due to the fact that the Southern River Basin Development Authorities are yet to engage in large scale irrigation.

An estimated N2,255 billion is envisaged for the development of the water resources sector during this 5-year period. The Anambra-Imo, The Upper and Lower Benue River Basin Development Authorities are currently starting major constructions; Ogun-Oshun and Niger River Basin Development Authorities are completing their first major works, Niger Delta is opening land that eventually will be drained rather than irrigated. When considering the current set-up and activities of the River Basin Development Authorities, it is expected that if all factors are favourable, their impact will soon be felt in every home in this Country. There are at present little more than one hundred major projects going on in the River Basins, with an average of 9 projects per Development Authority. Although they are still to fully realize their stated objectives, there is evidence all over the country that the River Basin Development Authorities have been quite active so far and will remain so.

THE OIL GLUT

OPEC's Future Lies In Making Sacrifice

BY DAYO ADEYEYE

MINISTERS of the thirteen nation organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries, (OPEC) recently held crucial talks in Geneva, on how to match their crude oil output to flagging world demand.

The meeting failed to reach a compromise on the crucial issues of price and production. Well-meaning people had expected OPEC, in view of the unfavourable world oil market situation, to reach an agreement to prevent a further disastrous fall in price and overall output. The failure of the meeting reveals clearly the new problems of the organisation and those of the world oil market in general. The major problem of OPEC is that of oil glut in the world market. The glut and its attendant consequences are in fact, the culmination of several factors that piled up over the years.

One of them is the present global economic recession. Then there is the increasing use of other alternative sources of energy.

On the supply side, more countries are striking oil wells thus increasing the number of oil producers who are not members of the organisation of petroleum exporting countries. Britain and Mexico are two important oil producers that are non-members of the organisation.

A cartel operates on the theoretical assumption that it enjoys a monopoly over the supply of a particular commodity and therefore is in a position to influence both price and supply. But since OPEC no longer enjoys any monopoly over the supply of oil in the world market, it is not surprising that its power over price and supply has been seriously eroded.

OPEC also has the problem of balancing the national interests of the individual member states with the collective interests of the organisation. Many of the member states have gigantic economic projects, and are determined to meet their development objectives through increased oil production, regardless of its consequences on the cartel's effectiveness.

International Politics has also contributed to the problem of OPEC. There is political tension between some of the members, notably Iran and Saudi Arabia. This has made it difficult to reach agreement on any issues.

Finally there is the western determination to break OPEC's power as a commodity cartel. Here one recalls ex-President Ford's threat that the objectives of the west is to be able to say to the oil producers 'EAT YOUR OIL'.

The present happenings seem to point to the inexorable fact that the era of OPEC power is gone. OPEC has grown remarkably since its formation in the early sixties to a powerful organisation able to challenge the dominating role of the oil companies and successively won favourable prices for its members. This has contributed to the economic affluence and rapid industrial development of most of the member states. Before the formation of OPEC, oil producing nations had been unable to influence either the price or the supply of their commodity in the world market.

OPEC has up till now been the only successful third world commodity cartel. Others have failed in the face of strong pressure from the industrial countries. But now it appears that the conditions which ensured OPEC's remarkable success are no longer present. And worse still its very existence is being threatened by its present predicaments.

The failure of OPEC will no doubt be a major setback for the developing countries by widening the growing gap between rich and poor nations. This development will not in the final analysis be in the interest of both the developed and the developing countries. Increased impoverishment of the OPEC member-nations will mean less demand for the products of the developed countries which in turn will further worsen the economic development of these countries.

It is therefore advisable that the international conspirators who are hell-bent on destroying the organisation should consider the implications of what they are doing.

For the OPEC-members, the urgency of the present situation calls for cooperation among the member-nations. They must sink their differences, bury their petty narrow national interests and make temporary sacrifices in order to reap better future benefits.

Steel Development

Functions And Achievements

In the second part of the series on the functions and achievements of the Steel Development Department, we shall study the set-up of the various steel projects in the country.

There are five steel plants under construction in different parts of the country. These are the Delta Direct Reduction Steel Complex at Aladja near Warri, the Ajaokuta Steel Project, and the three Inland Rolling Mills situated at Oshogbo, Jos and Katsina.

The contract for the construction of the Delta Direct Reduction Steel Complex, which is serviced by the direct reduction and electrical arc furnace, the most modern and efficient technology to be developed for iron and steel making, was signed in October, 1977.

The complex has a capacity for the provision of one million tonnes of steel per annum. It comprises four units: the lime plant, the pellet plant, the direct reduction plant, and a rolling mill. The auxiliary production units comprise the oxygen-nitrogen plant, the foundry, the central laboratories, the water and sewage system, energy distribution system, and the mechanical and electrical maintenance and warehouses. The products are rods, bars and billets, which will be fed into the three Inland Rolling Mills at Oshogbo, Jos and Katsina.

Following the completion of the Complex, the first billet was cast on November 29, 1981, climaxed by the formal commissioning of the Delta Steel Plant by the President, Alhaji Shehu Shagari, on January 29, 1982, as the first ever local steel production plant in Black Africa.

Within 10 months of its commencement of production, the Delta Steel Plant at Aladja, has as at the end of October, 1982, produced 70,000 tonnes of liquid steel, 62,000 tonnes of billets, and 7,000 tonnes of rolled products. It has also despatched to the Inland Rolling Mills a total of 27,000 billet tonnes, comprising: Jos Steel Rolline Mill (9,000 tonnes), Katsina Steel Rolling Mill (12,000 tonnes), and Oshogbo Steel Rolling Mill (6,000 tonnes). The projected 1983 operations of steel production for the Delta Steel Company alone would result in a net foreign exchange savings of N44.23 million for the country.

The contract for the establishment of the Ajaokuta Steel Plant was signed with Messrs. Tiaipromexport of the Soviet Union on July 13, 1979. It is a fully integrated iron and steel plant based on the conventional blast furnace route of iron-making with a production capacity of 1.3 million tonnes of steel per annum, rising to 2.6 million tonnes in the second phase and to 5.2 million tonnes in the third and final phases.

The Federal Government has awarded contracts up to N830 million for Civil Works and the construction of townships at the Ajaokuta Steel Complex. The site levelling and terracing as well as the erection base have been completed. The contracts for the main civil engineering works were awarded in October, 1980. In June, 1981, the President performed the foundation laying ceremony of the Complex and construction work has continued relentlessly ever since. It is expected to be completed in December, 1985. However, through the system of backward integration, the plant's two priority rolling mills will be commissioned in 1983.

The three Inland Rolling Mills, have a capacity of 210,000 tonnes per annum for the first phase with a provision for expansion to 420,000 tonnes and 720,000 tonnes in the second and third phases. Construction work on these mills began in December, 1979 and has since been completed. Production has started with the Katsina Steel Rolling Mill already producing 2,000 tonnes of rods and 1,000 tonnes of wire.

The rolling mills will serve as nuclei for the development and propagation of small scale industries around their vicinity. They will supply spares and consumables such as conveyor belts, safety appliances, wire, ropes and slings to the rolling mills and beds, steel doors and window meshes, nails, barbed wires and pins to small scale, steel consuming industries.

THE BEARDED STORY TELLER

TITLE OF BOOK: THE BEARDED STORY TELLER
 AUTHOR : OLADIPO YEMITAN
 PUBLISHER : OLAIYA FAGBAMIGBE LTD.
 PAGES : 124.

As its title indicates, "The Bearded Story Teller" is a book that contains folk tales as told by Dodo - the bearded story teller.

Dodo was once married soon after world war II. One day, he got annoyed with his wife and dealt her a severe blow which made her unconscious. When she recovered, she deserted him. Since then, no woman would marry Dodo for fear of being killed, and so he remained a lonely bachelor until Olu came into his life.

Olu was a stubborn child, who never heeded his parents' words and told lies to cover up his deeds. Olu's mother believed in the power of the supernatural to the annoyance of her husband, Bola. So when she learnt that Olu had befriended Dodo, the bearded story teller, she became worried because to her, Dodo was a spirit that could do harm to little children. She warned Olu never to go near Dodo again.

But Olu took so much interest in Dodo and his folk tales that, whenever he was sent on an errand, he stole some time to visit Dodo who always welcomed him, gave him presents and treated him like a son.

Titi, Olu's sister, was equally worried about Dodo, whom she also referred to as a spirit simply because he lived alone. But Olu was able to convince her that Dodo was a human being like them. One day, they both visited Dodo who told them interesting folk tales. After that Titi was convinced that Dodo was in fact a human being.

A question from Olu to Dodo about the Tortoise, prompted the story teller to go in search of the answer for his young friend. Dodo travelled from one village to another. On one occasion, he was stoned by irate villagers, but that did not debar him. He finally got the answer through the help of an old friend called Akala. Dodo then returned home to give the answer to his young friend and Olu was very pleased and determined to make his parents know about what Dodo had done for him.

So he invited Dodo to his parents home, incidentally Dodo and Mr. Bala had fought in world war II and they were able to recognise each other despite the long separation.

Mr. Bala had helped Dodo tremendously during the war. The story teller had not forgotten this, so it was a kind of old friends meeting again. And Dodo was no longer suspected to be a spirit. He was welcomed by Olu's parents who celebrated his home coming.

As the saying goes that 'old soldiers never die', Dodo went back to the army, while Olu who nutured him and his family went to high school. Mr Dodo displayed plenty of honesty and friendship towards young Olu. Some elders would have given Olu a false answer about Mr Tortoise, so as to avoid taking the pain of travelling out in search of the answer.

One lesson one could deduce from the book is that, we should not asume things unnecessarily, or Suspect someone unjustly. It is better to find out the true position of things before jumping to conclusions.

The author makes use of some inspiring proverbs such as: 'He who runs from a fight, will live to fight another day'. "In life one should balance firmness with kindness, never to be too strict, but never be too tolerant." The story is written in a simple language every one could understand, with a glossary of a few difficult words at the end of the book.

The regular use of such familiar names of people and places as: Olu, Titi, Koro, Lagos, Ilado, Jankara and Oshogbo, places the story in identifiable setting.

My only complain about the book is the absence of a brief background about the author, and a summary of the story on the back cover. This is very important because the summary of a book tells one about what it is all about - in fact that's what sells a book in most cases, as no reader would like to read a novel without a summary, or bearing an uninteresting summary. That apart, 'The Bearded story Teller' is an interesting novel by any standard.
