Pen Pals Wanted

IGNATIUS J. A. Wende, of Benue State Civil Service Commission, Makurdi, wants pen pals from all over the world. Interests — letter writing, jokes and stamps collecting, reading, indoor plays, football, photograph and typing. Age 22 years. Address: P.M.B. 2092, Makurdi, Benue State,

CRBS, Quite Clear

I WAS surprised to read Mr I. E. Ekpo's contribution that the reception condition of the Cross River State Radio was very poor (Nov. 1980 issue). I disagree entirely with his views. I have always received the Station clearly in my place in Bendel State, and the other time I was on vacation leave, it was my favourite. I say without hesitation that the Station is quite clear and the programmes are very interesting and entertaining.

I suggest however that its Saturday programmes should be reviewed. I have in mind a programme like Music Rendezvous.

I do not agree with I. E. Ekpo also that the programme schedules of the station are not published by this paper. The October issue of the magazine is a glaring example.

Once again, I commend the authorities of the CRBS for a job well done.

S. DODONDAWA.

Akeem Rasheed

I AM 16 years old and a student of Anglican Grammar School, Orita-Mefa, Ibadan. As a regular reader of your journal Radio/TV. Times, I would be grateful if you could publish my photograph for the benefit of those who want pen pals.

My pen pals can be from any country. Interests are, reading, film-show, music and religion. My contact address is N4/166B Oke-Aremo, Ibadan.

AKEEM RASHEED.

Include Sermons

KINDLY allow me space to express my views in your magazine Radio/TV. Times. I want you to include sermons in the magazine. This will no doubt, help the citizen especially the youths in building a strong and faithful Nation.

CHRISTOPHER ATERE,
AGEGE, LAGOS.

20k Is Reasonable

I AM a regular reader of the Radio-TV. Times. I am also one of the pioneers because I have been reading the journal since 1975, when the cost was only 5k. In the September issue of 1975 volume 7, Number 9 for reference.

In the September 1976 issue the pages were only 28 with good and interesting items. I therefore strongly suggest that the price be left as it is.

Amend Record Request Coupon

I WISH to make my observations and suggestions to you in respect of the "Record Request Coupon"

I have observed that some columns in the request coupon are not spacious enough to conveniently take the information they are suppose to take, for example, the column for names and addresses of persons making the request for is not enough to conveniently take the information meant for it. Equally guilty of this offence is the column for the person making the request.

Secondly, I would like to suggest that this request coupon should be printed in a way that when it is culled from the page, it will not affect the programmes or prints on the other side of the leaf as is the case now.

I hope the observations and suggestions made above be critically examined for possible amendment.

Mallam Abdulazeez A. Momodu
Warri

Thanks for your observation and suggestions. We shall effect possible amendment very soon.

LETTERS

KEEP IT UP

YOUR JOURNAL, the Radio/TV Times has provided a very encouraging start for beginners of current affairs through its various and interesting features.

Many readers like myself have benefited from these features which in most cases are well written and tailored to suit the understanding of all classes.

Please keep it up; but continue to give us more features on agriculture.

More Programme Schedules Please

May I be allowed a space to express my views on the popular magazine RADIO TV TIMES. Though readers of this magazine find it very interesting, but I shall be grateful if more programmes could be included - that is, T.V. Programme Schedules and Radio Programme Schedules.

Listeners will also appreciate it, if time given to the daily programme, "BUKA CONNECTION" can be reduced to half an hour.

Oshodi Research Efforts

—FIIR Major Successes Listed

IN his fourth lecture, the Research Director, Federal Institute of Industrial Research Oshodi, Dr. Koleoso, gave a vivid description of the establishment and activities of the Institute, its various departments and units, and what the Institute had achieved so far.

The fifth lecture, the text of which is reproduced below tells in a nutshell the impact the Institute has on the technological development of Nigeria.

IT may not be possible in this talk to spell out, in detail, the contributions of the Federal Institute of Industrial Research to the technological development of Nigeria since its inception. I would, therefore, like to highlight what I consider as its major contributions.

The activities of the Institute has always been a mixture of basic and applied research, the efforts of the Institute are directed towards:

Import substitution of industrial raw materials and consumer products

Upgrading and modernisation of indigenous technology and food products and

Provision of technical services.

In the area of import substitution the Institute has made impacts in pulping of tropical hardwoods among many others. Prior to the experimental investigations to evaluate the pulping characteristics of some tropical hardwoods by FIIR in collaboration with the Topical Products Institute, London, it was generally believed that this class of wood was not suitable for pulp and paper making. Investigations have shown that this assertion or belief is wrong and that a number of tropical hardwoods, of which Gmelina Arborea is the best, are suitable for pulp and paper making.

Indeed, Nigeria's decision to invest well over N400 million in the establishment of three pulp and paper industries in the country is based on the result of the Institute's investigation which revealed that Gmelina Arborea can be a source of short fibre for its paper mill in Jebba. This trend will change when Nigeria sets up its three pulp and paper mills at Iwoyin, Calabar and Enugu utilising Gmelina Arborea as the source of short fibre for the maximum production of 100,000 t/a of paper per mill. Recent investigation at the Institute has also shown the suitability of the flambouyant tree, which grows very fast, as a good source of short fibre for pulp and paper manufacture.

The Institute's efforts in the area of Ceramics research have been geared towards characterisation and investigation of the Nigeria Ceramics minerals for industrial uses. This work has made it possible for local deposits to be exploited by the Ceramics Industry. At least, three pottery, in Lagos, Abeokuta and Nkalagu have benefited from the investigation.

In addition, a number of State Governments have benefited from the result of investigations carried out at the Institute and have set up brick factories in their various states. These include the Lagos, Kaduna, Borno and Gongola states. The use of bricks made with local materials, in place of imported cement for block making is expected to reduce the cost of residential buildings to a level that is within the reach of many Nigerians.

The desire to reduce further the cost of building houses, using materials competitive to blocks made from cement, gravel and sand, led to investigation on non-thermal bricks. These bricks which are stronger than the normal bricks, are of comparative strength with cement blocks and are cheaper. It is hoped that these bricks will soon become a common feature in the building industry in Nigeria.

The Federal Institute of Industrial Research has investigated and produced malt from Sorghum (that is guinea corn), ~~rice~~ <sup>soya bean</sup> ~~cocoa~~ <sup>from</sup> Cocoa fat and Palm Kernel Oil and modified Cassava Starch for the textile industries. The various starches, used in the textile industries as textile, queling, solvitox, are all imported into the country. Investigations carried out show that the normal starch obtained from cassava is not suitable for textile sizing, finishing or printing because of its high viscosity.

Research efforts at the Institute have shown that cassava starch, when properly modified to give similar properties with imported starches, has been found suitable in the textile industry. As of now there is one major industry at Ihalia in Nigeria producing starch from cassava. The Institute has made contacts with the management of this industry with a view to modifying their starch and make it more suitable for the textile industry.

There are about sixteen breweries now operating in the country and producing beer of different colour, taste and quality. Without exception, these breweries import all their raw materials inputs except water. Barley malt is the largest single unit imported among these raw materials. Investigations carried at FIIRO show quality larger beer can be produced from 50% substitution of barley malt with sorghum malt. This research, when completed and taken up by the breweries will save the country an enormous amount of foreign exchange.

The Federal Institute of Industrial Research has also scored a major breakthrough in the cosmetics industry. Most, if not all the cosmetic industries operating in Nigeria today depend on imported paraffin wax as a base for their products. Petroleum — based cosmetic products (skin creams and lotions are known to be inferior to the vegetable — oil based ones. With this in mind and with the crying need to use the cocoa, fat and palm kernel oil commercially produced in this country, the Institute started an investigation geared at making an acceptable and good skin cream.

The investigations have resulted in the production of an emollient, soft skin cream (Nico Cream which not only enriches the skin with the natural vitamins from the vegetable oils but also proved effective for the treatment of baby and adult skin rashes, and dry skins. More demartological investigations on this skin cream are still in progress. In the meantime, the Institute has received requests from investors who want to produce the cream commercially.

The Federal Institute of Industrial Research has also been involved in the up-grading and modernization of indigenous technology and it has been quite successful in many areas. The indigenous method of processing gari is laborious and froth with danger posed by the inhalation of volatile hydrocyanic acid during frying.

It was also observed that gari produced the local way, has low shelf-life owing to its high moisture content: added to this is the poor packaging and packaging led the Institute to develop a mechanised process using a machine designed in the Institute. The product has better quality and shelf-life and is packed more hygienically than the gari produced in the villages.

With this achievement, it is now easier to standardise the quality of gari which is the staple food of millions of Nigerians. The gari plant has been further jointly improved upon by the Federal Institute of Industrial Research and the Newell-Dunford Engineering firm of England.

Today, there are three commercial plants, capable of producing ten tons of gari daily, operating in West Africa. Two of these are in Nigeria and are owned by the Iddo-Ibadan Cooperative Farmers Association near Omi Adfo in Ibadan and the Texagric Company near Abeokuta while the third one is in Ghana. These plants have revolutionised gari processing in Africa and hopefully in the world. It is hoped that many Nigerians will avail themselves of this opportunity and set up more of these plants in the country.

Palm wine has always been the favourite drink of many generations of Nigerians. This wine has to be tapped and consumed within hours; if not, it turns sour and unpalatable. The Federal Institute of Industrial Research has not only developed a process for preserving and bottling palm wine but has also designed and developed a low-capital processing plant suitable for small scale industries.

The preserved and bottled palm wine has been found to retain its flavour and appearance for one year or more. It is, therefore, no longer necessary to drink off palm wine soon after it is tapped because it can now be stocked in the house or fridge and served to visitors like any other drink.

Today an indigenous company in Lagos, is using the process and plants designed and fabricated at the Institute for making palm wine. A similar plant is also operating at the Nigerian Institute for Oil Palm Research in Benin City. A number of requests have also been received from local investors.

The Institute can also boast of the 'FIIRO STILL' which is used for the

PAINFUL VENGEANCE

By Augustine Isikhuemen

AS one of its programmes to mark the yelutide season, Talks Department of the FRCN organised Christmas short story Competition. The announcement was carried over the network of FRCN, published in the journals and News papers, the response was great.

Of all the good essays received, three stories emerged the best, the first winning story titled "TOGETHER-FOREVER" was written by Mr Nduwke O. Uche of the Department of Electrical Engineering, University of Nigeria, Nsukka.

Second winning Story "THE GODS GAVE HER DAUGHTERS" was written by a pensioner, Mr. Olu Kufefi, while Mr Augustine Isikhuemen from Uromi won the third prize for his essay titled "PAINFUL VENGEANCE"

The three winning essays had since been broadcast over the network of FRCN on Christmas and New Year Day.

Below is the full text of the third winning essay. We shall publish in the subsequent issues of Radio/TV Times, the second and first winning essays.

Once upon a time, there lived in the city of Benin, a man whose name was Omonrodion. He had a wife whose name was Ebikere. For twenty years after their marriage, they had no Son nor daughter of their own and everyone began to think that Ebikere was barren. As a result of this, she no longer participated in conversations with her womenfolk especially if the conversation is centred on children or procreation. This made her very miserable.

At that time, it was believed that whatever happened to a man in his lifetime was the making of the gods. So, one day, Omonrodion called his wife after supper. "Ebikere" he said when she had come, "I want us to go to the medicine man at Ugo to know whether we are going to remain like this for life" "I shall do as you please but may the outcome be in our favour" Ebikere said in supplication to the gods.

They woke up very early the next morning and had their breakfast. Ebikere ate very little. The mere mention of the matter again made her loose appetite for food. As they walked towards Ugo, husband and wife remained speechless. Today, they were going to know their fate — whether they will ever have children or not. When they were a few yards from the famous medicine man's house, they paused. Omonrodion looked this way and that way. Seeing no one he knelt down by the roadside and prayed that the gods may let the outcome of their visit be in their favour.

When they got there, Obonuhioran, (for that was the medicine man's name) was told by his seventh wife that he has some visitors. He came to the unknown guests, his magical fan in his hand and welcomed them into his house. Before Omonrodion and Ebikere could explain their predicament, he told them that he knew they were coming and why they were there. He told them that they had not offended the gods in any way and that they were going to have children in the very near future. They were going to give birth to twin baby boys who, to their dismay, would become bitter enemies.

Omonrodion was the happiest man on earth when he was told he would soon have children. But Ebikere was not so sure. She therefore decided to wait and see. May be at last she will have children of her own; whether they will become enemies was another matter. Obonuhioran then told them that they should sacrifice a cow to their ancestors and Ogun (the god of iron) at the birth of the children. This would remove the enmity between them.

When the children were born, Omonrodion and Ebikere invited their relations from far and wide and they celebrated. At the ceremony, the eldest man in the Village, prayed that the children may live long to perform their parent's funerals. They were thereafter named Odion (the first-born) and Akhere. Omorodion was so overwhelmed with joy that he forgot to make the sacrifice as he was told by the oracle at Ugo.

Odion and Akhere grew up to become very powerful young men. So much was their resemblance to each other that people in the village found it difficult to distinguish between them. Omorodion and Ebikere were proud of them but forgot to make the cow—sacrifice to the providential gods who blessed them with two stout young men. They forgot everything about the oracle at Ugo.

It was the custom at that time that whatever is done for Odion should be done for Akhere. So, when they were seven years old, they were both given two coconuts to plant. They were expected to look for the neck of a broken pot on which to plant, the coconut. As Odion was the first to lay hands on two pot-necks, he gave one to Akhere and they planted the nuts. Odion was lazy. He did not fence around his Coconut Plant and it was soon eaten up by goats. But Akhere cared for his and very soon it was above the reach of goats. It soon flowered and brought out fruits. As a result of this, Odion was not happy. "Why should his junior brother's coconut bear fruits when he has none he thought bitterly.

When the fruits were ripe, Akhere plucked one and on dehusking it, he discovered nothing but gold! He ran to his mother and broke the incredible news. Ebikere quickly informed her husband and the news quickly spread far and wide that Akhere's coconut palm bore gold.

The Oba received the news in utter amazement and incredulity. Such has never happened in the Kingdom of Benin. "There are tales of great and unimaginable feats being performed by men in ancient times" So he sent for Akhere. When he came, he bowed and said "Saiki, Oba gha to, kperè". Then he said that he was the man who planted the gold-bearing coconut palm. When the Oba discovered that there was no magic about it, he let Akhere go and gave him his blessing. He was also given a string of beads by the Oba.

SHORT STORY

Odion had thought Akhere would be killed so that he could lay claim to the coconut palm. But when Akhere came back honoured, he was disappointed. He therefore decided to look for a way to get rid of either Akhere or the gold-bearing coconut palm.

The following year, the coconut blossomed again. This time the way it blossomed was unprecedented. When it brought out fruits, it had to be supported with sticks to prevent it from breaking under the enormous load. It was at this time Odion decided to look for a way to destroy the tree. After thinking for a long time, it occurred to him that he was the person who gave Akhere the pot-neck on which the coconut was planted. Now, he had the knife and the yam and he can either make the tree live or die.

One evening, after supper when children were playing gleefully under the bright moonlight, Odion paid a visit to his brother. After exchanging greetings and a few discussions, Odion told his brother that he had a very sad news for him. Akhere, taken aback, asked anxiously what it was. "You know the pot-neck I gave you?" Odion asked. "The one" Akhere began "on which I planted that coconut?" Odion answered in the affirmative and said that he needed it urgently. Not being able to comprehend why the demand was being made, Akhere told him that he could give him another one the following day. At this Odion told him vehemently that he needed the original one, neither more nor less. Akhere, totally confused, told him to forget the matter till the following morning.

The following day, Akhere discovered that Odion was not joking at all. Odion made it abundantly clear that no one could make him change his mind. Akhere begged and begged but to no avail. Their parents pleaded with Odion but he refused threatening to take his life if his demand was not met. This, Omonrodion could not bear and it was therefore decided that Akhere should fell the coconut palm as there was no other way of removing the controversial pot-neck.

In the presence of everybody present, Akhere told Odion that it might be his turn to cry some day. He sharpened his axe and cut down the coconut palm with its premature fruits. He removed the pot-neck carefully and gave it to Odion. Odion was extremely contented. He had succeeded in destroying the famous gold-bearing coconut palm. Akhere could not just know why his brother had done this to him.

It came to pass that after five years Odion's wife gave birth to a baby girl. After the girl's birth, came the mother's death. So Odion laboured relentlessly to make the child live. It is customary that when a baby is three months old, a string of beads is tied round its neck. It happened that Akhere had the bead, so Odion took it from him and tied it round the baby's neck. The coconut episode wasn't far from Akhere's mind.

The child, who was named Ekiomado, grew up to become a very beautiful young girl. Since Odion had lost his wife at the birth of Ekiomado, Ekiomado became to him both daughter and companion. People who have heard of the beauty of Ekiomado came from far and wide to ask for her hand in marriage. Even chiefs were not left out in the wooing of Ekiomado, but she did not find her choice among them.

When at last Ekiomado made her choice, Odion, her proud father, was very pleased. She had chosen Uyinor, a heir to the Benin throne. This would eventually bring Odion close to the royal palace. So, they started to prepare heavily for the great day on which Ekiomado would finally be made Uyinor's wife.

She would be eating royal food, sleeping on royal bed and even breathing royal air. To her that was enough to hope for. Odion would have a royal in-law. That would remove him from his present state of abject poverty.

It was during these preparations that Akhere realised that his time had come. Time for Odion to receive the nemesis of his jealousy. It was three days to the much-longed for royal marriage that Akhere demanded for his bead. Odion had forgotten everything about the bead. Akhere told him that he had given it to him when Ekiomado was three months old. Odion decided to cut off the string of beads and give it to him but Akhere would not accept it if it is cut.

Odion begged that he should be allowed to buy a new one but Akhere refused. He said that he wanted the original one and even the gods couldn't make him accept any other. The fiancé of Ekiomado came and begged but Akhere bluntly refused. What fate had in stock for Odion was gradually being uncovered.

After a series of overtures aimed at changing Akhere's mind, Odion discovered that he was not prepared to listen at all. Akhere told them that he will have got his original bead from Ekiomado's neck by sunset. There was no other way for the bead to be removed except by cutting off Ekiomado's neck. Towards sunset, Ekiomado's neck was cut, therefore and the bead given to Akhere. Thus Akhere got vengeance over his brother, Odion, for cutting down the gold-bearing coconut palm.

Chrystal Church Choir

Latest Stars In Church Music Horizon

COMMERCIAL church music has for some time appeared to be gaining ground. Most churches want to keep a choir and, in addition to the primary purpose of providing the usually essential services of a church choir, wax records out of their songs — both for image-making and fund-raising.

It is apparent that majority of those who claim to have the special flair for church music are inclined to do so more for the appealing entertainment it provides than for its religious affectation. Nonetheless, the fact remains that there is a ready market for church music.

The idea of turning church music into lucrative commercial enterprise, incidentally, constitutes one of the most striking new dimensions to Nigerian music. In addition, the integration of orchestral music into the normal conduct of church services has helped to promote the keen interest in recorded church music. Moreover, recording enjoys equal technical professionalism as the pop records do. Sometimes, the quality has been known to turn out even far better.

One of the newest additions to this new crop of church choirs is the Choir of the Crystal Cathedral Church, Ebute Metta, Lagos. The choir started functioning officially in late February, 1971, under the conductorship of Sister (Ekpa Ekpennyong) who was later succeeded by Brother James (Mr. S. K. Eshun) in 1974. The composition of its orchestration is somehow strikingly different from the usual set-up of local orchestras — trumpet, drums of various sorts, seekers and organ. All these have the ultimate effect of making the music sound equally as, if not more, swinging and enticing as that of the average 'juju, elpee. The Choir operates solely on the organ and a variety of voices. In most cases, it has been pretty difficult, trying to differentiate elpees produced by this group from the local juju pieces, until the lyrics started filtering in, loaded with the usually characteristic evangelical messages.

The Church of the Chrystal Cathedral Church plays the dual role of entertaining and spreading the christian faith to the common man. Of particular interest is its peculiar style of music presentation. Its perfection in world-articulation, superbly displayed in "Voice of the Spirit", Vol. Three is the latest of the choir's three albums. The other two are "Let Us Pray" and "Voice of the Spirit" Vol. Two.

The rare qualities of "Voice of the Spirit" Vol. three starts with the easily gripping appeal of the sleeve. The usual studio noises found characteristic with communal singing are reduced to the barest minimum. Thus, the listener can find it much easier to follow the underlying messages. The album contains eight tracks, among which are "Pleased to See Me Free", "The Unbroken Chain", "On the Easter Morning", and "Bye and Bye". The titles no doubt speak for themselves.

A proper appraisal of this choir's work cannot be complete, however, without a word about the church itself. This is a development of a healing home founded by Brother A. E. Inyang in 1964. In effect, the purpose of the church is basically to find solution to problems, including bodily, mental and psychic afflictions, for the attainment of good health, peace, and happiness.

SPORTS IN 1980

-Nigeria's experience recounted

By Ernest Okonkwo

ALL told, Nigeria's sporting balance sheet for 1980 showed credits. Our fiasco in Moscow and our avalanche of losses of professional boxing titles, among other things, might tend to detract from, and dull the glow of our performances during the year. But certainly, our sports men and women did enough in various fields, to defend our National Colours and honours.

Apart from Soccer — our premier national sport in which we captured the continental diadem by winning the Cup of Unity, Nigeria more than held her grounds in some of the lesser known sports. At the 6th African Table Tennis Championships in Dakar, Senegal, in December, 1980, Nigeria came as defending champions in Togo, Nigeria won nine out of the 10 titles competed for. In Senegal, she didn't do less. Out of seven titles at stake, our redoubtable men and women stroked their way through six titles losing only the women's singles to Ghana when Esther Lamptey beat Nigeria's Olawunmi Majekodunmi.

At the all-Nigeria Table Tennis (Open) Championships, Nigeria's Atanda Musa and Titus Omotara won the men's doubles title in a field that included crack players from among other Nations, the Soviet Union and China. In Lawn Tennis, a new Nigerian and African Singles champion emerged. He is Lawn Tennis' man of the year. Nduka Odizor who also got through to the 3rd round at Wimbledon and came second to Australia's Steve Doherty at the Ogbe Hard Court Tournament. He was also one of the architects of Nigeria's brilliant performances at the African Lawn Tennis Championships in Libya. Nigerian players witnessed quality internal tennis at the Ogbe Hard, Ogun Green and Kaduna Clay courts; with rewarding exposure and experience.

Those were laudable. But the climax of Nigeria's sporting achievements in 1980 was the Green Eagles winning of the new Cup of Unity donated by the Supreme Council for Sports in Africa.

Let's cast our minds back to that memorable final on Saturday 22nd March, 1980 in front of Mr. President Alhaji Shehu Shagari himself and before a most vocal and patriotic crowd of about 100,000 Nigerians. The atmosphere was tense with excitement and great expectation when Nigeria's aristocratic Eagles made the slick and youthful Algerians mere hard working ordinary citizens. Nigerian scored three sparkling goals to Algeria's nothing. Ishola Folorunsho, Ernest Okonkwo, Sebastian Ofurum and Kevin Ejor for who described the epic battle for Radio Nigeria had an exciting story to tell.

The Algerians fought back but the nearest they could get at scoring was when they hit the upright with a shot. Nigeria's second goal also in the first half was motivated by a Christian Chukwu free-kick and executed by an Aloy Atuegbu—Segun Odegbami unstoppable combination. With two goals in the kitty, the Eagles started the second phase with renewed strength and urgency. And if the first two goals were exciting, the third one was explosive as shown by the ecstasy and deafening ovation.

Nigeria scored eight goals and conceded only one in the competition. Mathematical Segun Odegbami top-scored with three goals while Aloysius Atuegbu, Ifeanyi Onyedika, Okay Isima, Felix Qwolabi and Muda Lawal each scored one goal for Nigeria. The Eagles also won the Fair Play trophy and their captain — Christian Chukwu was over-whelmingly voted the best player in the competition. It couldn't be better.

At the Moscow Olympics, however, Nigeria entered competitors in five sports — Football, Boxing, Athletics, Weight-lifting and Wrestling! But we did not win any medals — not even in Boxing where all our eight boxers lost their fights. But this is not to say that some of our boxers did not come close to winning. Stamina seemed to be the problem in several cases.

Nigeria's Peter Okodogbe and Dele Ndubuisi Udoh did well to reach the Semi-final of the 100m and 400m events respectively. But our hopeful 4 x 100m men relay quartet dropped the baton mid-way through the promising race.

The Green Eagles were a brood of injury-hit players as a result of their epic battle with Tunisia just before Moscow '80. They lost to Kuwait 1-3, and to Columbia 0-1; but drew with the eventual gold medalists Czechoslovakia 1-1 in Leningrad. As for Spain '82, the Green Eagles have done well so far to eliminate Tunisia Africa's 1978 World Cup representatives and Tanzania.

The Junior National Squad — The Flying Eagles walked over Ivory Coast and thrashed their Tunisian counterparts by four goals to nil on Saturday 27th December, 1980. And in spite of their losing 1-4 in Sourse, Tunisia against overwhelming odds — cold weather, hostile crowd and officiating, they qualified on a 5-4 goal aggregate to meet Cameroon for the semi-finals.

Looking into 1981, I foresee a bright and hopeful dawn on the sporting horizon. With Obisia Nwankpa fighting for the World Crown in Lagos on 28/2/81, with the Green Eagles poised for Spain '82 and the Junior Eagles equally aspiring for the Coca-Cola sponsored Junior world Cup this year in Australia, the future appears bright. Let us wait and cautiously watch.

The Writer.

OCTOBER LECTURES

RESEARCH EFFORTS

Distillation of alcohol from palm wine.
Palm wine, when allowed to ferment, yields a mixture of alcohols — mainly methanol and ethanol. The fermented product is usually distilled by our local people to produce the alcohol mixture commonly known as 'Ogogoro'. The bush stills, which are usually hidden in the bush, are each made of an empty 45 gallon — drum to which a winding copper tube is attached. This crude still has no system for the control of the products of distillation. The drinkers of local gin or ogogoro are therefore exposed to the danger of lethal methylated spirit contamination.

The Federal Institute of Industrial Research has designed and built a low-cost 'STIL' with in-built temperature control and purification system suitable for small scale industries. This plant won the first prize at the International Trade Fair held in Ghana in 1973. An indigenous organisation has shown keen interest in this still.

Other research activities in which the Institute has made remarkable achievements are in the production of vinegar from palm wine and the development of protein-rich 'Soy-Ogi'.

Most of the vinegar used in this country are imported synthetics. Curiously enough, Nigeria has an abundance of natural sources of vinegar — the most important of which are fermented palm or raphia wine and molasses from sugar cane. The Federal Institute of Industrial Research has therefore designed and built a small — scale 'Vinegar Generator' and used it to produce natural vinegar from fermented palm wine.

The Institute's 'Palm-wine Complex' enables the production of bottled palm wine, portable alcohol from palm or vinegar both of which are equally important, industrially.

'Ogi' like 'Gari' is one of Nigeria's staple foods. It is made from fermented corn mash. 'Ogi' is an energy — rich but protein deficient food. People fed on 'Ogi' alone, especially weaning children and babies, suffer from protein deficiency which causes a disease known as kwashiokor.

The Federal Institute of Industrial Research has consequently developed a process for manufacture of a protein-deficiency problem in the normal 'ogi'. 'Soy-ogi' is prepared as 'ogi'. It retains its cultural or local aspect but with a vastly improved nutritional quality. This process still has to be commercialised.

Apart from evolving technology for the manufacture of food and drinks the Institute also provides technical services in the form of analytical services and consultancy to both government and private firms as well as individuals. These technical services include analysis of raw materials, and finished-products in addition to preparation and evaluation of feasibility reports. Many state — owned companies have been established as a result of these consultancy services.
